The first publication of this Epistle.

THIS paper is a sort of bill of complaint, begun many years since, and drawn up by snatches, as the several occasions offered. I had no thoughts of publishing it, till it pleased some Persons of Rank and Fortune (the Authors of Verses to the Imitator of Horace, and of an Epistle to a Doctor of Divinity from a Nobleman at Hampton Court) to attack, in a very extraordinary manner, not only my Writings (of which, being public, the Public is judge) but my Person, Morals, and Family, whereof, to those who know me not, a truer information may be requisite. Being divided between the necessity to say something of myself, and my own laziness to undertake so awkward a task, I thought it the shortest way to put the last hand to this Epistle. If it have any thing pleasing, it will be that by which I am most desirous to please, the Truth and the Sentiment; and if any thing offensive, it will be only to those I am least sorry to offend, the vicious or the ungenerous.

Many will know their own pictures in it, there being not a circumstance but what is true; but I have, for the most part, spared their Names, and they may escape being laughed at, if they please.

I would have some of them know, it was owing to the request of the learned and candid Friend to whom it is inscribed, that i make not as free use of theirs as they have done of mine. However, I shall have this advantage and honour, on my side, that whereas, by their proceeding, any abuse may be directed at any man, no injury can possibly be done by mine, since a nameless Character can never be found out, but by its truth and likeness. DR. ARBUTHNOT.

An Apology for himself and his Writings.

Ep. to Dr. Arbuthnot.) AT the time of publiſhing this Epiſtle, the Poet's patience was quite exhauſted by the endleſs impertinence of Poetaſters of all ranks and conditions; as well thoſe who courted his favour, as thoſe who envied his reputation. So that now he had reſolved to quit his hands of both together, by the publication of a DUNCIAD. Th[illegible] deſign he communicated to his excellent Friend Dr. ARBUTHNOT, who, although as a Man of Wit and Learning he might not have been diſpleaſed to ſee their common injuries revenged on this pernicious Tribe; yet, as our Author's Friend and Phyſician, was ſolicitous of his eaſe and health; and therefore unwilling he ſhould provoke ſo large and powerful a party.

Their difference of opinion, in this matter, gives occaſion to the following Dialogue. where, in a natural and familiar detail of all his Provocations, both from flatterers and ſlanderers, our Author has artfully interwoven an Apology for his moral and poetic Character.

For after having told his caſe, and humouroufly applied to his Phyſician in the manner one would aſk for a Receipt to kill Vermin, he ſtrait goes on, in the common Character of Aſkers of advice, to tell his Doctor that he had already taken his party and determined of his remedy. But uſing a preamble, and introducing it (in the way of Poets) with a Simile, in which he names Kings, Queens, and Miniſters of State, his Friend takes the alarm. begs him to forbear, to ſtick to his ſubject, and to be eaſy under ſo common a calamity.

To make ſo light of his diſaſter provokes the Poet; he breaks the thread of his diſcourſe, which was to lead his Friend gently, and by degrees, into his project; and abruptly tells him the application of his Simile, at once,

Out with it, Dunciad! let the ſecret paſs, &c.

But recollecting the humanity and tenderneſs of his Friend, which, he apprehends, might be a little ſhocked at the apparent ſeverity of ſuch a proceeding, he aſſures him, that his good-nature is alarmed without a cauſe, for that nothing has leſs feeling than this ſort of Offenders; which he illuſtrates in the Examples of a damn'd Poet, a detected Slanderer, a Table-Parаſite, a Church-Buffoon, and a Party-Writer (from v. 1 to 100.)

But, in this enumeration, coming again to Naves, his Friend once more ſtops him, and bids him conſider what hoſtilities this general attack will ſet on foot. So much the better, replies the Poet; for, conſidering the ſtrong antiphathy of bad to good, enemies they will always be, either open or ſecret: and it admits of no queſtion, but a Slanderer is leſs hurtful than a Flatterer. For, ſays he (in a pleaſant Simile addreſſed to his Friend's profeſſion)

Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,
It is the ſlaver kills, and not the bite.

And how abject and exceſſive the flattery of theſe creatures was, he ſhews, by obſerving, that they praiſed him even for his infirmities; his bad health, and his inconvenient ſhape (v. 100 to 125.)

But ſtill it might be ſaid, that if he could bear this evil of Authorſhip no better, he ſhould not have wrote at all. To this he anſwers, by lamenting the natural bent of his diſpoſition, which, from his very birth, had drawn him ſo ſtrongly towards Poetry, as if it were in execution of ſome ſecret decree of Heaven for crimes unknown. But though he offended in becoming an Author, he offended in nothing elſe. For his early verſes were perfectly innocent and harmleſs,

Like gentle Fanny's was my flowing theme,
A painted miſtreſs, or a purling ſtream.

Yet even then, he tells us, two enraged and hungry Critics fell upon him, without any provocation. But this might have been borne, as the common lot of diſtinction. But it was his peculiar ill-fortune to create a Jealouſy in One, whom not only many good offices done by our Author to him and his friends, but a ſimilitude of genius and ſtudies might have inclined to a reciprocal affection and ſupport. On the contrary, that otherwiſe amiable Perſon, being, by nature, timorous and ſuſpicious; by education a party-man; and, by the circumſtances of fortune, beſet with flatterers and pick-thanks; regarded our Author as his Rival, ſet up by a contrary Faction, with views deſtructive of public liberty and his friend's reputation. And all this, with as little provocation from Mr. Pope's conduct in his poetic, as in his civil character.

For though he had got a Name (the reputation of which he agreeably rallies in the deſcription he gives of it) yet he never, even when moſt in faſhion, ſet up for a Patron, or a Dictator amongſt the Wits; but ſtill kept in his uſual privacy; leaving the whole Caſtalian ſtate, as he calls it, to a Mock-Mecenas, whom he next deſcribes (v. 125 to 261.)

And, ſtruck with the ſenſe of that dignity and felicity inſeparable from the character of a true Poet, he breaks out into a paſſionate vow for a continuance of the full Liberty attendant on it; And to ſhew how well he deſerves it, and how ſafely he might be truſted with it, he concludes his wiſh with a deſcription of his temper and diſpoſition (v. 261 to 271.)

This naturally leads him to complain of his Friends, when they conſider him in no other view than that of an Author: as if he had neither the ſame right to the enjoyments of life, the ſame concern for his higheſt intereſts, or the ſame diſpoſitions of benevolence, with other people.

Beſides, he now admoniſhes them, in his turn, that they do not conſider to what they expoſe him, when they urge him to write on; namely, to the ſuſpicions and the diſpleaſure of a Court; who are made to believe, he is always writing; or at leaſt to the fooliſh criticiſms of court ſycophants, who pretend to find him, by his ſtyle, in the immoral libels of every idle ſcribler: though he, in the mean time, be ſo far from countenancing ſuch worthleſs traſh in others, that he would be ready to execrate even his own beſt vein of poetry, if made at the expence of Truth or Innocence.

Curſt be the verſe, how well ſo e'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my foe;
Give Virtue ſcandal, Innocence a fear,
Or from the ſoft-ey'd virgin ſteal a tear.

(Sentiments, which no efforts of genius, without the concurrence of the heart, could have expreſſed in ſtrains ſo exquiſitely ſublime) that the ſole object of his reſentment was vice and baſeneſs. In the detection of which, he artfully takes occaſion to ſpeak of that by which he himſelf had been injured and offended: and concludes with the character of one who had wantonly outraged him, and in the moſt ſenſible manner (v. 271 to 334.)

And here, moved again with freſh indignation at his ſlanderers, he takes the advice of Horace, ſume Superbiam quæſitam meritis, and draws a fine picture of his moral and poetic conduct through life.

In which he ſhews that not fame, but VIRTUE was the conſtant object of his ambition: that for this he oppoſed himſelf to all the violence of Cabals, and the treacheries of Courts: the various iniquities of which having diſtinctly ſpecified, he ſums them up in that moſt atrocious and ſenſible of all, (v. 334 to 359.)

The whiſper, that to greatneſs ſtill too near,
Perhaps yet vibrates on his SOV'REIGN'S ear.
Welcome for thee, fair Virtue! all the paſt;
For thee, fair Virtue! welcome ev'n the laſt.

But here again his Friend interrupts the ſtrains of his divine enthuſiaſm, and deſires him to clear up an objection made to his conduct, at Court, „That it was inhumane to inſult the Poor; and ill-breeding to affront the Great.„ To which he replies, That indeed, in his purſuit of Vice, he rarely conſidered how Knavery was circumſtanced; but followed it, with his Vengeance, indifferently, whether it led to the Pillory, or the Drawing-Room (v. 359 to 368.)

But leſt this ſhould give his Reader the idea of a ſavage intractable Virtue, which could bear with nothing, and would pardon nothing, he takes to himſelf the ſhame of owning that he was of ſo eaſy a nature, as to be duped by the ſlendereſt appearances, a pretence to Virtue in a witty Woman: ſo forgiving, that he had ſought out the object of his beneficence in a perſonal Enemy: ſo humble, that he had ſubmitted to the converſation of bad Poets: and ſo forbearing, that he had curbed in his reſentment under the moſt ſhocking of all calumnies, abuſes on his Father and Mother (v. 368 to 388.)

This naturally leads him to give a ſhort account of their births, fortunes, and diſpoſitions; which ends with the tendereſt wiſhes for the happineſs of his Friend; intermixed with the moſt pathetic deſcription of that filial Piety, in the exerciſe of which he makes his own happineſs to conſiſt.

Me let the tender office long engage
To rock the Cradle of repoſing Age;
With lenient arts extend a Mother's breath,
Make Languor ſmile, and ſmooth the bed of Death;
Explore the thought, explain the aſking eye,
And keep a while one Parent from the ſky!

And now the Poem, which holds ſo much of the DRAMA, and opens with all the diſorder and vexation that every kind of impertinence and ſlander could occaſion, concludes with the utmoſt calmneſs and ſerenity, in the retired enjoyment of all the tender offices of FRIENDSHIP and PIETY (v. 388 to the end.)

P. SHUT, ſhut the door, good John! fatigu'd I ſaid,
Tye up the knocker, ſay I'm ſick, I'm dead,
The Dog-ſtar rages! nay 'tis paſt a doubt,
All Bedlam, or Parnaſſus, is let out:
Fire in each eye, and papers in each hand,
They rave, recite, and madden round the land.
What walls can guard me, or what ſhades can hide?
They pierce my thickets, thro' my Grot they glide,
By land, by water, they renew the charge,
They ſtop the chariot, and they board the barge.
No place is ſacred, nor the Church is free,
Ev'n Sunday ſhines no Sabbath-day to me:

NOTES.

VER. 1. Shut, ſhut the door, good John!) John Searl, his old and faithful ſervant: whom he has remembered, under that character, in his Will.

VER. 12. Ev'n Sunday ſhines no Sabbath-day to me.) The beauty of this line ariſes from the figurative terms of the predicate alluding to the ſubject. A ſecret, in elegant expreſſion, which our Author often practiſed.

Then from the Mint walks forth the man of rhyme,
Happy! to catch me, juſt at Dinner-time.
Is there a Parſon, much be-mus'd in beer,
A maudlin Poeteſs, a rhyming Peer,
A Clerk, foredoom'd his father's ſoul to croſs,
Who pens a Stanza, when he ſhould engroſs?
Is there, who, lock'd from ink and paper, ſcrawls
With deſp'rate charcoal round his darken'd walls?
All fly to TWIT'NAM, and in humble ſtrain
Apply to me, to keep them mad or vain.
Arthur, whoſe giddy ſon neglects the Laws,
Imputes to me and my damn'd works the cauſe:
Poor Cornus ſees his frantic wife elope,
And curſes Wit, and Poetry, and Pope.
Friend to my Life! (which did not you prolong,
The world had wanted many an idle ſong)
What Drop or Noſtrum can this plague remove?

A dire dilemma! either way I'm ſped.
If foes, they write, if friends, they read me dead.

Who can't be ſilent, and who will not lye:
To laugh, were want of goodneſs and of grace,
And to be grave, exceeds all Pow'r of face.
I ſit with ſad civility, I read
With honeſt anguiſh, and an aching head;
And drop at laſt, but in unwilling ears,
This ſaving counſel, „Keep your piece nine years.„

Nine years! cries he, who high in Drury-lane,
Lull'd by ſoft Zephyrs thro' the broken pane,
Rhymes ere he wakes, and prints before Term ends,
Oblig'd by hunger, and requeſt of friends:
„The piece, you think, is incorrect? why take it,
„I'm all ſubmiſſion, what you'd have it, make it.„

Three things another's modeſt wiſhes bound,
My Friendſhip, and a Prologue, and ten pound.

VER. 49. Pitholeon) The name taken from a fooliſh Poet of Rhodes, who pretended much to Greek. Schol. in Horat. l. i. Dr. Bentley pretends, that this Pitholeon libelled Cæſar alſo. See notes on Hor. Sat. 10. l. i. P.

'Tis ſung, when Midas' Ears began to ſpring,
(Midas, a ſacred perſon and a King)
His very Miniſter who ſpy'd them firſt,
(Some ſ y his Queen) was forc'd to ſpeak, or burſt.
And is not mine, my friend, a ſorer caſe,
When ev'ry coxcomb perks them in my face?
A. Good friend forbear! you deal in dang'rous things.
I'd never name Queens, Miniſters, or Kings;
Keep cloſe to Ears, and thoſe let aſſes prick,
'Tis nothing — P. Nothing? if they bite and kick?
Out with it, DUNCIAD! let the ſecret paſs,
That ſecret to each fool, that he's an Aſs:
The truth once told (and wherefore ſhould we lie?)
The queen of Midas ſlept, and ſo may I.
You think this cruel? take it for a rule,
No creature ſmarts ſo little as a fool.
Let peals of laughter, Codrus! round thee break,
Thou unconcern'd canſt hear the mighty crack:
Pit, box, and gall'ry in convulſions hurl'd,

NOTES.

VER. 69. 'Tis ſung, when Midas' &c.) The Poet mean ſung by Perſius; and the words alluded to are,

Vidi, vidi ipſe, Libelle
Auriculas Aſini Mida Rex habet.

The tranſition is fine; but obſcure: for he has here imitated the manner of that myſterious writer, as well as taken up his image. Our Author had been hitherto complaining of the folly and importunity of indigent Scriblers; he now inſinuates he ſuffered as much of both, from Poetaſters of Quality.

VER. 72. Queen) The ſtory is told, by ſome, of his Barber; but by Chaucer of his Queen. See Wife of Bath's Tale in Dryden's Fables. P.

VER. 80. That ſecret to each fool, that he's an Aſs:) i. e. that his ears (his marks of folly) are viſible.

Thou ſtand'ſt unſhook amidſt a burſting world.
Who ſhames a Scribler? break one cobweb thro',
He ſpins the ſlight, ſelf-pleaſing thread anew:
Deſtroy his fib or ſophiſtry, in vain,
The creature's at his dirty work again,
Thron'd in the centre of his thin deſigns,
Proud of a vaſt extent of flimzy lines!
Whom have I hurt? has Poet yet, or Peer,
Loſt the arch'd eye-brow, or Parnaſſian ſneer?
And has not Colly ſtill his lord, and whore?
His butchers Henley, his free-maſons Moor?
Does not one table Bavius ſtill admit?
Still to one Biſhop Philips ſeem a wit?
Still Sappho — A. Hold; for God-ſake — you'll offend,
No Names — be calm — learn prudence of a friend:
I too could write, and I am twice as tall;
But foes like theſe — P. One Flatt'rer's worſe than all.
Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,
It is the ſlaver kills, and not the bite.

Notes.

VER. 88. Alluding to Horace;

Si fractus illabatur orbis,
Impavidum ferient ruinæ. P.

VER. 92. The creature's at his dirty work again,) This metamorphoſing, as it were, the Scribler, into a Spider is much more poetical than a compariſon would have been. But Poets ſhould be cautious how they employ this figure; for where the likeneſs is not very ſtriking, inſtead of giving force, they become obſcure. Here, every thing concurs to make them run into one another. They both ſpin; not from the head (reaſon) but from the guts (paſſions and prejudices) and ſuch a thread that can entangle none but creatures weaker than themſelves.

VER. 98. free-maſons Moor?) He was of this ſociety, and frequently headed their proceſſions.

A fool quite angry is quite innocent:
Alas! 'tis ten times worse when they repent.
One dedicates in high heroic prose,
And ridicules beyond a hundred foes:
One from all Grubstreet will my fame defend,
And more abusive, calls himself my friend.
This prints my Letters, that expects a bribe,
And others roar aloud, „Subscribe, subscribe.„
There are, who to my person pay their court:
I cough like Horace, and, tho' lean, am short,
Ammon's great son one shoulder had too high,
Such Ovid's nose, and „Sir! you have an Eye —
Go on, obliging creatures, make me see
All that disgrac'd my Betters, met in me.
Say for my comfort, languishing in bed,
„Just so immortal Maro held his head: „
And when I die, be sure you let me know
Great Homer dy'd three thousand years ago.

VARIATIONS.

VER. III. in the MS.

For song, for silence some expect a bribe;
And other roar aloud, „Subscribe, subscribe.“
Time, praise, or money, is the least they crave;
Yet each declares the other fool or knave.

NOTES.

VER. 118. Sir, you have an Eye) It is remarkable that amongst these compliments on his infirmities and deformities, he mentions his eye, which was fine, sharp, and piercing. It was done to intimate, that flattery was as odious to him when there was some ground for commendation, as when there was none.

Why did I write? what ſin to me unknown
Dipt me in ink, my parents', or my own?
As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I liſp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.
I left no calling for this idle trade,
No duty broke, no father diſobey'd.

VARIATIONS.

After v. 124. in the MS.

But, friend, this ſhape, which You and Curl (a) admire,
Came not from Ammon's ſon, but from my Sire (b):
And for my head, if you'll the truth excuſe,
I had it from my Mother, (c) not the Muſe.
Happy, if he, in whom theſe frailties join'd,
Had heir'd as well the virtues of the mind.

(a) Curl ſet up his head for a ſign. (b) His Father was crooked.
(c) His Mother was much afflicted with head-achs.

NOTES.

VER. 127. As yet a child, &c.) He uſed to ſay, that he began to write verſes further back than he could remember. When he was eight years old, Ogilby's Homer fell in his way, and delighted him extremely; it was followed by Sandys' Ovid; and the raptures theſe then gave him were ſo ſtrong, that he ſpoke of them with pleaſure ever after. About ten, being at ſchool at Hide-park-corner, where he was much neglected, and ſuffered to go to the Comedy with the greater boys, he turned the tranſactions of the Iliad into a play, made up of a number of ſpeeches from Ogilby's tranſlation, tacked together with verſes of his own. He had the addreſs to perſuade the upper boys to act it; he even prevailed on the Maſter's Gardener to repreſent Ajax; and contrived to have all the actors dreſſed after the pictures in his favourite Ogilby. At twelve he went with his Father into the Foreſt: and then got firſt acquainted with the writings of Waller, Spencer, and Dryden; in the order I have named them. On the firſt ſight of Dryden, he found he had what he wanted. His Poems were never out of his hands; they became his model; and from them alone he learnt the whole magic of his verſification. This year he began an epic Poem, the ſame which Bp. Atterbury, long afterwards, perſuaded him to burn. Beſides this, he wrote, in thoſe early days, a Comedy and Tragedy, the latter taken from a ſtory in the Legend of St. Genevieve. They both deſervedly underwent the ſame fate. As he began his Paſtorals ſoon after, he uſed to ſay pleaſantly, that he had literally followed the example of Virgil, who tells us, Cum canerem reges & prælia, &c.

VER. 130. no father diſobey'd.) When Mr. Pope was yet a Child, his Father, though no Poet, would ſet him to make Engliſh verſes. He was pretty difficult to pleaſe, and would often ſend the boy back to new turn them. When they were to his mind, he took great pleaſure in them, and would ſay, Theſe are good rhymes.

VER. 139. Talbot, &c.) All theſe were Patrons or Admirers of Mr. Dryden; though a ſcandalous libel againſt him, entitled, Dryden's Satyr to his Muſe, has been printed in the name of the Lord Somers, of which he was wholly ignorant.

Theſe are the perſons to whoſe account the Author charges the publication of his firſt pieces: perſons, with whom he was converſant (and he adds beloved) at 16 or 17 years of age; an early period for ſuch acquaintance. The catalogue might be made yet more illuſtrious, had he not confined it to that time when he writ the Paſtorals and Windſor Foreſt, on which he paſſes a ſort of Cenſure in the lines following.

Happier their author, when by theſe belov'd!
From theſe the world will judge of men and books,
Not from the Burnets, Oldmixons, and Cooks.

Soft were my numbers; who could take offence
While pure Deſcription held the place of Senſe?
Like gentle Fanny's was my flow'ry theme,
A painted miſtreſs, or a purling ſtream.
Yet then did Gildon draw his venal quill;
I wiſh'd the man a dinner, and ſate ſtill.
Yet then did Dennis rave in furious fret;

NOTES

VER. 146. Burnets, &c.) Authors of ſecret and ſcandalous Hiſtory.

Ibid. Burnets, Oldmixons, and Cooks.) By no means Authors of the ſame claſs, though the violence of party might hurry them into the ſame miſtakes. But if the firſt offended this way, it was only through an honeſt warmth of temper, that allowed too little, to an excellent underſtanding. The other two, with very bad heads, had hearts ſtill worſe.

VER. 148. While pure Deſcription held the place of Senſe!) He uſes pure equivocally, to ſignify either chaſte or empty; and has given in this line what he eſteemed the true Character of deſcriptive poetry, as it is called. A compoſition, in his opinion, as abſurd as a feaſt made up of ſauces. The uſe of a pictoreſque imagination is to brighten and adorn good ſenſe; ſo that to employ it only in deſcription, is like childrens delighting in a priſm for the ſake of its gaudy colours; which when frugally managed, and artfully diſpoſed, might be made to repreſent and illuſtrate the nobleſt obiects in nature.

VER. 150. A painted meadow, or a purling ſtream. is a verſe of Mr. Addiſon. P.

I never anſwer'd, I was not in debt.
If want provok'd, or madneſs made them print,
I wag'd no war with Bedlam or the Mint.
Did ſome more ſober Critic come abroad;
If wrong, I ſmil'd; if right, I kiſs'd the rod.
Pains, reading, ſtudy, are their juſt pretence,
And all they want is ſpirit, taſte, and ſenſe.
Comma's and points they ſet exactly right,
And 'twere a ſin to rob them of their mite.
Yet ne'er one ſprig of laurel grac'd theſe ribalds,

NOTES.

VER. 163. theſe ribalds.) How deſervedly this title is given to the genius of PHILOLOGY, may be ſeen by a ſhort account of the manners of the modern Scholiaſts.

When in theſe latter ages, human learning raiſed its head in the Weſt, and its tail, verbal criticiſm, was, of courſe, to riſe with it; the madneſs of Critics ſoon became ſo offenſive, that the ſober ſtupidity of the monks might appear the more tolerable evil. J. Argyropylus, a mercenary Greek, who came to teach ſchool in Italy, after the ſacking of Conſtantinople by the Turks, uſed to maintain that Cicero underſtood neither Philoſophy nor Greek: while another of his Countrymen, J. Luſcaris by name, threatened to demonſtrate that Virgil was no Poet. Countenanced by ſuch great examples, a French Critic afterwards undertook to prove that Ariſtotle did not underſtand Greek, nor Titus Livius, Latin. It was the ſame diſcernment of ſpirit, which has ſince diſcovered that Joſephus was ignorant of Hebrew; and Eraſmus ſo pitiful a Linguiſt, that, Burman aſſures us, were he now alive, he would not deſerve to be put at the head of a country ſchool. For, though time has ſtrip'd the preſent race of Pedants of all the real accompliſhments of their predeceſſors, it has conveyed down this ſpirit to them, unimpaired; it being found much eaſier to ape their manners, than to imitate their ſcience. However, thoſe earlier Ribalds raiſed an appetite for the Greek language in the Weſt: inſomuch, that Hermolaus Barbarus, a paſſionate admirer of it, and a noted Critic,

From flaſhing Bentley down to pidling Tibalds:
Each wight, who reads not, and but ſcans and ſpells, uſed to boaſt, that he had invoked and raiſed the Devil, and puzzled him into the bargain, about the meaning of the Ariſtotelian ΕΝΤΕΛΕΧΕΙΑ. Another, whom Balzac ſpeaks of, was as eminent for his Revelations: and was wont to ſay, that the meaning of ſuch a verſe, in Perſius, no one knew but GOD and himſelf. While the celebrated Pomponius Lætus, in exceſs of Veneration for Antiquity, became a real Pagan, raiſed altars to Romulus, and ſacrificed to the Gods of Larium: in which he was followed by our countryman, Baxter, in every thing, but in the expence of his ſacrifices.

But if the Greeks cried down Cicero, the Italian Critics knew how to ſupport his credit. Every one has heard of the childiſh exceſſes into which the ambition of being thought CICERONIANS carried the moſt celebrated Italians of this time. They abſtained from reading the Scriptures for fear of ſpoiling their ſtyle: Cardinal Bembo uſed to call the Epiſtles of St. Paul by the contemptuous name of Epiſtolaccias, great overgrown Epiſtles. But ERASMUS cured their frenzy in that maſterpiece of good ſenſe, his Ciceronians. For which (in the way Lunatics treat their Phyſicians) the elder Scaliger inſulted him with all the brutal fury peculiar to his family and profeſſion.

His ſon Joſeph, and Salmaſius had indeed ſuch endowments of nature and art, as might have raiſed modern learning to a rivalſhip with the ancient. Yet how did they and their adverſaries tear and worry one another? The choiceſt of Joſeph's flowers of ſpeech were, Stercus Diaboli, and Lutum ſtercore maceratum. It is true, theſe were laviſhed upon his enemies: for his friends he had other things in ſtore. In a letter to Thuanus, ſpeaking of two of them; Clavius and Lipſius, he calls the firſt, a monſter of ignorance; and the other, a ſlave to the Jeſuits, and an Idiot. But ſo great was his love of ſacred amity at the ſame time, that he ſays, I ſtill keep up my correſpondence with him, notwithſtanding his Idiotry, for it is my principle to be conſtant in my friendſhips — Je ne reſte de luy eſcrive, nonobſtant ſon Idioterie, d'autant que je ſuis conſtant en amitié. The character he gives of his own Chronology, in the ſame letter, is no leſs extraordinary: Vous vous pouvez aſſurer que noſtre Euſebe ſera un tréſor des merveilles de la doctrine Chronologique. But this modeſt account of his own work, is nothing in compariſon of the idea the Father gives his Bookſeller of his own Perſon. Who, when he was preparing ſomething of Julius Scaliger's for the Preſs, deſired the Authors would give him directions concerning his Picture, which was to be ſet before the book. Whoſe anſwer (as it ſtands in his collection of Letters) is, that if the engraver could collect together the ſeveral graces of Maſſiniſſa, Xenophon, and Plato, he might then be enabled to give the public ſome faint and imperfect reſemblance of his Perſon. Nor was Salmaſius's judgment of his own parts leſs favourable to himſelf; as Mr. Colomies tells the ſtory. This Critic, on a time, meeting two of his brethren, Meſſ. Gaulmin and Mauſſac, in the Royal Library at Paris, Gaulmin, in a virtuous conſciouſneſs of their Importance, told the other two, that he believed, they three could make head againſt all the learned in Europe: To which the great Salmaſius fiercely replied, „Do you and M. Mauſſac join „yourſelves to all that are learned in the world, and you ſhall „find that I alone am a match for you all.„

Voſſius tells us, that when Laur. Valla had ſnarl'd at every name of the firſt order in antiquity, ſuch as Ariſtotle, Cicero, and one whom I ſhould have thought this Critic the likelieſt to ſpare, the redoubtable PRISCIAN, he impiouſly boaſted that he had arms even againſt Chriſt himſelf. But Codrus Urceus went further, and actually uſed thoſe arms the other only threatened with. This man while he was preparing ſome trifling piece of Criticiſm for the preſs, had the misfortune to hear his papers were deſtroyed by fire; On which he is reported to have broke out — „Quod„nam ego tantum ſcelus concepi, O Chriſte! quem ego tuorum „unquam læſi, ut ita inexpiabili in me odio debaccheris? Audi „ea quæ tibi mentis compos, & ex animo dicam. Si forte, cum „ad ultimum vitæ finem pervenero, ſupplex accedam ad te oratum, „neve audias, neve inter tuos accipias oro; cum Infernis Diis in „æternum vitam agere decrevi.„ Whereupon, ſays my author, he quitted the converſe of men, threw himſelf into the thickeſt of a foreſt, and wore out the wretched remainder of his life in all the agonies of deſpair.

Preſerv'd in Milton's or in Shakeſpear's name.
Pretty! in amber to obſerve the forms
Of hairs, or ſtraws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms!
The things we know, are neither rich nor rare,
But wonder how the devil they got there.

Were others angry: I excus'd them too;
Well might they rage, I gave them but their due.
A man's true merit 'tis not hard to find;

NOTES.

VER. 164. Slaſhing Bentley) This great man, tho' with all his faults, deſerved to be put into better company. The following words of Cicero deſcribe him not amiſs. „Habuit a na„tura genus quoddam acuminis, quod etiam arte limaverat, „quod erat in reprehendendis verbis verſutum & ſollers: ſed „ſæpe ſtomachoſum, nonnunquam frigidum, interdum etiam fa„cetum.„

VER. 169. Pretty! in amber to obſerve the forms, &c.) Our Poet had the full pleaſure of this amuſement ſoon after the publication of his Shakeſpear. Nor has his Friend been leſs entertained ſince the appearance of his edition of the ſame poet. The liquid Amber of whoſe Wit has lately licked up, and enrolled ſuch a quantity of theſe Inſects, and of tribes ſo groteſque and various, as would have puzzled Reaumur to give names to. Two or three of them it may not be amiſs to preſerve and keep alive. Such as the Rev. Mr. J. Upton, Thomas Edwards, Eſq. and, to make up the Triumvirate, their learned Coadjutor, that very reſpectable perſonage, Mr. THEOPHILUS CIBBER. — As to the poetic imagery of this paſſage, it has been much and juſtly admired; for the moſt deteſtable things in nature, as a toad, or a beetle, become pleaſing when well repreſented in a work of Art. But it is no leſs eminent for the beauty of the thought. For though a ſcribler exiſts by being thus incorporated, yet he exiſts intombed, a laſting monument of the wrath of the Muſes.

VER. 173. Were others angry:) The Poets.

VER. 174. — I gave them but their due.) Our Author always found thoſe he commended leſs ſenſible then thoſe he reproved. The reaſon is plain. He gave the latter but their due; and the other thought they had no more.

But each man's ſecret ſtandard in his mind,
That Caſting-weight pride adds to emptineſs,
This, who can gratify? for who can gueſs?
The Bard whom pilfer'd Paſtorals renown,
Who turns a Perſian tale for half a Crown,
Juſt writes to make his barrenneſs appear,
And ſtrains from hard-bound brains, eight lines a year;
He, who ſtill wanting, tho' he lives on theft,
Steals much, ſpends little, yet has nothing left:
And He, who now to ſenſe, now nonſenſe leaning,
Means not, but blunders round about a meaning:
And He, whoſe fuſtian's ſo ſublimely bad,
It is not Poetry, but proſe run mad:
All theſe, my modeſt Satire bad tranſlate,
And own'd that nine ſuch Poets made a Tate.
How did they fume, and ſtamp, and roar, and chafe!
And ſwear, not ADDISON himſelf was ſafe.

VER. 180. — a Perſian tale.) Amb. Philips tranſlated a Book called the Perſian tales.

VER. 186. Means not, but blunders round about a meaning:) A caſe common both to Poets and Critics of a certain order; only with this difference, that the Poet writes himſelf out of his own meaning; and the Critic never gets into another man's. Yet both keep going on, and blundering round about their ſubject, as benighted people are wont to do, who ſeek for an entrance which they cannot find.

VER. 189. All theſe, my modeſt Satire bad tranſlate,) See their works, in the Tranſlations of claſſical books by ſeveral hands.

VER. 190. — nine ſuch Poets, &c.) Alluding, not to the nine Muſes, but to nine Taylors.

VER. 192. And ſwear, not ADDISON himſelf was ſafe.) This is an artful preparative for the following tranſition; and finely obviates what might be thought unfavourably of the ſeverity of the ſatire, by thoſe who were ſtrangers to the provocation.

Peace to all ſuch! but were there One whoſe fires
True Genius kindles, and fair Fame inſpires;

NOTES.

VER. 193. But were there One whoſe fires &c.) Our Poet's friendſhip with Mr. Addiſon began in the year 1713. It was cultivated, on both ſides, with all the marks of mutual eſteem and affection, and conſtant intercourſe of good offices. Mr. Addiſon was always commending moderation, warned his friend againſt a blind attachment to party, and blamed Steele for his indiſcreet zeal. The tranſlation of the Iliad being now on foot, he recommended it to the public, and joined with the Tories in puſhing the ſubſcription; but at the ſame time adviſed Mr. Pope not to be content with the applauſe of one half of the nation. On the other hand, Mr. Pope made his friend's Intereſt his own (ſee note on v. 215. 1 Ep. B. ii. of Hor.) and, when Dennis ſo brutally attacked the Tragedy of Cato, he wrote the piece called A narrative of his madneſs.

Thus things continued till Mr. Pope's growing reputation, and ſuperior genius in Poetry gave umbrage to his friend's falſe delicacy: and then it was he encouraged Philips and others (ſee his Letters) in their clamours againſt him as a Tory and Jacobite, who had aſſiſted in writing the Examiners; and, under an affected care for the government, would have hid, even from himſelf, the true grounds of his diſguſt. But his jealouſy ſoon broke out, and diſcovered itſelf, firſt to Mr. Pope, and, not long after, to all the world. The Rape of the Lock had been written in a very haſty manner, and printed in a collection of Miſcellanies. The ſucceſs it met with encouraged the Author to reviſe and enlarge it, and give it a more important air, which was done by advancing it into a mock-epic Poem. In order to this it was to have its Machinery; which, by the happieſt invention, he took from the Roſicrucian Syſtem. Full of this noble conception, he communicated it to Mr. Addiſon, who he imagined would have been equally delighted with the improvement. On the contrary, he had the mortification to have his friend receive it coldly; and more, to adviſe him againſt any alteration; for that the poem in its original ſtate was a delicious little thing, and, as he expreſſed it, merum ſal. Mr. Pope was ſhocked for his friend; and then firſt began to open his eyes to his Character.

Bleſt with each talent and each art to pleaſe,
And born to write, converſe, and live with eaſe:

NOTES.

Soon after this, a tranſlation of the firſt book of the Iliad appeared under the name of Mr. Tickell; which coming out at a critical juncture, when Mr. Pope was in the midſt of his engagements on the ſame ſubject, and by a creature of Mr. Addiſon's, made him ſuſpect this to be another ſhaft from the ſame quiver: And after a diligent enquiry, and laying many odd circumſtances together, he was fully convinced that it was not only publiſhed with Mr. Addiſon's participation, but was indeed his own performance. Mr. Pope, in his firſt reſentment of his uſage, was reſolved to expoſe this new Verſion in a ſevere critique upon it. I have now by me the Copy he had marked for this purpoſe; in which he has claſſed the ſeveral faults in tranſlation, language, and numbers, under their proper heads. But the growing ſplendor of his own work ſo eclipſed the faint efforts of this oppoſition, that he truſted to its own weakneſs and malignity for the juſtice due to it. About this time, Mr. Addiſon's ſon-in-law, the E. of Warwick, told Mr. Pope, that it was in vain to think of being well with his Father who was naturally a jealous man; that Mr. Pope's ſuperior talents in poetry had hurt him, and to ſuch a degree, that he had underhand encouraged Gildon to write a thing about Wycherley, in which he had ſcurrilouſly abuſed Mr. Pope and his family; and for this ſervice he had given Gildon ten guineas, after the pamphlet was printed. The very next day Mr. Pope, in a great heat, wrote Mr. Addiſon a Letter, wherein he told him, he was no ſtranger to his behaviour; which, however, he ſhould not imitate: But that what he thought faulty in him, he would tell him fairly to his face; and what deſerved praiſe he would not deny him to the world: and, as a proof of this diſpoſition towards him, he had ſent him the incloſed, which was the Character, firſt publiſhed ſeparately, and afterwards inſerted in this place of the Epiſt. to Dr. Arbuthnot. This plain dealing had no ill effect. Mr. Addiſon treated Mr. Pope with civility, and, as Mr. Pope believed, with juſtice, from this time to his death, which happened about three years after.

Should ſuch a man, too fond to rule alone,
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne,
View him with ſcornful, yet with jealous eyes,
And hate for arts that caus'd himſelf to riſe;
Damn with faint praiſe, aſſent with civil leer,
And without ſneering, teach the reſt to ſneer;
Willing to wound, and yet afraid to ſtrike,
Juſt hint a fault, and heſitate diſlike;
Alike reſerv'd to blame, or to commend,
A tim'rous foe, and a ſuſpicious friend;
Dreading ev'n fools, by Flatterers beſieg'd,
And ſo obliging, that he ne'er oblig'd;
Like Cato, give his little Senate laws,
And ſit attentive to his own applauſe;
While Wits and Templars ev'ry ſentence raiſe,

NOTES.

Ibid. But were there one whoſe fires, &c.) The ſtrokes in this Character are highly finiſhed. Atterbury ſo well underſtood the force of them, that in one of his letters to Mr. Pope he ſays, „Since you now know where your ſtrength lies, I hope you „will not ſuffer that talent to lie unemployed." He did not; and, by that means, brought ſatiric Poetry to its perfection.

VER. 208. And ſo obliging, that he ne'er oblig'd;) He was one of thoſe obliging perſons who are the humble Servants of all Mankind. Mr. Pope therefore did wiſely, he ſoon returned his ſhare in him to the common ſtock.

And wonder with a foolish face of praise —

Who would not weep, if ATTICUS were he!

Or plaister'd posts, with claps, in capitals? 216
Or smoaking forth, a hundred hawkers load,

NOTES.

VER. 212. And wonder with a foolish face of praise —) When men, out of flattery, extol what they are conscious they do not understand, as is sometimes the case of men of education, the fear of praising in the wrong place is likely enough to give a foolish turn to the air of an embarrassed countenance.

VER. 213. Who but must laugh, if such a man there be?) While a Character is unapplied, all the various parts of it will be considered together; and if the assemblage of them be as incoherent as in this before us, it cannot fail of being the object of a malignant pleasantry.

VER. 214. Who would not weep, if ATTICUS were he!) But when we come to know it belongs to Atticus, i.e. to one whose more obvious qualities had before gained our love or esteem; then friendship, in spite of ridicule, will make a separation: our old impressions get the better of our new, or, at least, suffer themselves to be no further impaired than by the admission of a mixture of pity and concern.

Ibid. ATTICUS) It was a great falshood, which some of the Libels reported, that this Character was written after the Gentleman's death; which see refuted in the Testimonies prefixed to the Dunciad. But the occasion of writing it was such as he would not make public out of regard to his memory: and all that could further be done was to omit the name, in the Editions of his Works.

VER. 216. claps, in capitals?) The bills of Quack-Doctors and Quack-Booksellers being usually pasted together on the same posts.

VER. 218. On wings of winds came flying all abroad?) Hopkins, in the civth Psalm.

ture of compoſition. But, in the practice of theſe Critics, knowing an author by his ſtyle, is like judging of a man's whole perſon from the view of one of his moles.

When Mr. Pope wrote the Advertiſement to the firſt Edition of the new Dunciad, intimating, that „it was by a different hand „from the other, and found in detached pieces, incorrect, and „unfiniſhed," I objected to him the affectation of uſing ſo unpromiſing an attempt to miſlead his Reader. He replied, that I thought too highly of the public taſte; that, moſt commonly, it was formed on that of half a dozen people in faſhion, who took the lead, and who ſometimes have obtruded on the Town the dulleſt performances, for works of Wit: while, at the ſame time, ſome true effort of genius, without name or recommendation, hath paſſed by the public eye unobſerved or neglected; That he once before made the trial I now objected to, with ſucceſs, in the Eſſay on Man: which was at firſt given (as he told me) to Dr. Younge, to Dr. Deſaguliers, to Lord Bolingbroke, to Lord Pagett, and, in ſhort, to every body but to him who was capable of writing it. However, to make him amends, this ſame Public, when let into the ſecret, would, for ſome time after, ſuffer no poem, with a moral title, to paſs for any one's but his. So the Eſſay on human Life, the Eſſay on Reaſon, and many others of a worſe tendency, were very liberally beſtowed upon him.

This, and a great deal more he added on the ſame occaſion, and aſſured me, that his new Dunciad would be full as well underſtood. He was not miſtaken. This fourth book, the moſt ſtudied and highly finiſhed of all his Poems, was eſteemed obſcure

(a name, which, in exceſs of modeſty, the Reader gives to what he does not underſtand) and but a faint imitation, by ſome common hand, of the other three. He had, himſelf, the malicious pleaſure to hear this judgment paſſed on his favourite Work by ſeveral of his Acquaintance; a pleaſure more to his taſte than the flatteries they uſed to entertain him with, and were then intentionally paying him. Of which he gave me another inſtance, that afforded him much diverſion. While theſe acquaintance read the Eſſay on Man as the work of an unknown author, they fairly owned they did not underſtand it: but when the reputation of the poem became ſecured by the knowledge of the Writer, it ſoon grew ſo clear and intelligible, that, on the appearance of the Comment on it, they told him, they wondered the Editor ſhould think a large and minute interpretation neceſſary.

And, if he lye not, muſt at leaſt betray:
Who to the Dean, and ſilver bell can ſwear,
And ſees at Cannons what was never there;
Who reads, but with a luſt to miſapply,
Make Satire a Lampoon, and Fiction Lye.
A laſh like mine no honeſt man ſhall dread,
But all ſuch babling blockheads in his ſtead.

pens to be enviouſly attacked, or falſly accuſed, it is natural to think, that a ſenſe of gratitude for ſo agreeable an obligation, or a ſenſe of that honour reſulting to our Country from ſuch a Writer, ſhould raiſe amongſt thoſe who call themſelves his friends, a pretty general indignation. But every day's experience ſhews us the very contrary. Some take a malignant ſatisfaction in the attack; others a fooliſh pleaſure in a literary conflict; and the far greater part look on with a ſelfiſh indifference.

VER. 299. Who to the Dean, and ſilver bell &c.) Meaning the man who would have perſuaded the Duke of Chandos that Mr. P. meant him in thoſe circumſtances ridiculed in the Epiſtle on Taſte. See Mr. Pope's Letter to the Earl of Burlington concerning this matter.

Eternal ſmiles his emptineſs betray,
As ſhallow ſtreams run dimpling all the way.
Whether in florid impotence he ſpeaks,
And, as the prompter breathes, the puppet ſqueaks;
Or at the ear of Eve, familiar Toad,
Half froth, half venom, ſpits himſelf abroad,
In puns, or politics, or tales, or lies,
Or ſpite, or ſmut, or rhymes, or blaſphemies.
His wit all ſee-ſaw, between that and this,
Now high, now low, now maſter up, now miſs,
And he himſelf one vile Antitheſis.
Amphibious thing! that acting either part,
The trifling head, or the corrupted heart,
Fop at the toilet, flatt'rer at the board,
Now trips a Lady, and now ſtruts a Lord.
Eve's tempter thus the Rabbins have expreſt,
A Cherub's face, a reptile all the reſt,
Beauty that ſhocks you, parts that none will truſt,
Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the duſt.
Not Fortune's worſhiper, nor Faſhion's fool,
Not Lucre's madman, nor Ambition's tool,
Not proud, nor ſervile; Be one Poet's praiſe,
That, if he pleas'd, he pleas'd by manly ways:
That Flatt'ry, ev'n to Kings, he held a ſhame,
And thought a Lye in verſe or proſe the ſame.

VER. 320. Half froth,) Alluding to thoſe frothy excretions, called by the people, Toad-ſpits, ſeen in ſummer time hanging upon plants, and emitted by young inſects which lie hid in the midſt of them, for their preſervation, while in their helpleſs ſtate.

"That not in Fancy's maze he wander'd long,
"But ſtoop'd to Truth, and moraliz'd his ſong:
"That not for Fame, but Virtue's better end,

NOTES.

VER. 340. That not in Fancy's maze he wander'd long,) His merit in this will appear very great, if we conſider, that in this walk he had all the advantages which the moſt poetic Imagination could give to a great Genius. M. Voltaire, in a MS. letter now before me, writes thus from England to a friend in Paris. „I intend to ſend you two or three poems of Mr. Pope, the „beſt poet of England, and at preſent of all the world. I hope „you are acquainted enough with the Engliſh tongue, to be „ſenſible of all the charms of his works. For my part, I look „upon his poem called the Eſſay on Criticiſm as ſuperior to „the Art of poetry of Horace; and his Rape of the Lock is, in „my opinion, above the Lutrin of Deſpreaux. I never ſaw „ſo amiable an imagination, ſo gentle graces, ſo great variety, „ſo much wit, and ſo refined knowledge of the world, as in „this little performance." MS. Let. Oct. 15, 1726.

VER. 341. But ſtoop'd to Truth, and moraliz'd his ſong:) This may be ſaid no leſs in commendation of his literary, than of his moral character. And his ſuperior excellence in poetry is owing to it. He ſoon diſcovered in what his force lay; and he made the beſt of that advantage, by a ſedulous cultivation of his proper talent. For having read Quinctilian early, this precept did not eſcape him, Sunt hæc duo vitanda prorſus: unum ne tentes quod effici non poſſit; alterum, ne ab eo, quod quis optime facit, in aliud, cui minus eſt idoneus, transferas. It was in this knowledge and cultivation of his genius that he had principally the advantage of his great maſter, Dryden; who, by his Mac-Flecno, his Abſolom and Achitophel, but chiefly by his Prologues and Epilogues, appears to have had great talents for this ſpecies of moral poetry; but, unluckily, he ſeem'd neither to underſtand nor attend to it.

Ibid. But ſtoop'd to Truth) The term is from falconry; and the alluſion to one of thoſe untamed birds of ſpirit, which ſometimes wantons at large in airy circles before it regards, or ſtoops to, its prey.

"He ſtood the furious foe, the timid friend,
"The damning critic, half approving wit,
"The coxbomb hit, or fearing to be hit;
"Laugh'd at the loſs of friends he never had,
"The dull, the proud, the wicked, and the mad;
"The diſtant threats of vengeance on his head,
"The blow unfelt, the tear he never ſhed;
"The tale reviv'd, the lye ſo oft o'erthrown,
"Th' imputed traſh, and dulneſs not his own;
"The morals blacken'd when the writings 'ſcape,
"The libel'd perſon, and the pictur'd ſhape;
Abuſe, on all he lov'd, or lov'd him, ſpread,
A friend in exile, or a father, dead;
The whiſper, that to greatneſs ſtill too near,

NOTES.

VER. 350. the lye ſo oft o'erthrown) As, that he received ſubſcriptions for Shakeſpear, that he ſet his name to Mr. Broome's verſes, &c. which, tho' publicly diſproved, were nevertheleſs ſhameleſsly repeated in the libels, and even in that called the Nobleman's Epiſtle.

VER. 351. Th' imputed traſh) Such as profane Pſalms, Court-Poems, and other ſcandalous things, printed in his Name by Curl and others.

VER. 354. Abuſe, on all he lov'd, or lov'd him, ſpread) Namely on the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Burlington, Lord Bathurſt, Lord Bolingbroke, Biſhop Atterbury, Dr. Swift, Dr. Arbuthnot, Mr. Gay, his Friends, his Parents, and his very Nurſe, aſperſed in printed papers, by James Moore, G. Ducket, L. Welſted, Tho. Benlley, and other obſcure perſons. P.

VER. 356. The whiſper, that to greatneſs ſtill too near,) By the whiſper is meant calumniating honeſt Characters. Shakeſpear has finely expreſſed this office of ſycophant of greatneſs in the following line:

Rain ſacrificial whiſperings in his ear.

By which is meant the immolating mens reputations to the vice or vanity of his Patron.

Perhaps, yet vibrates on his SOV'REIGN's ear —
Welcome for thee, fair Virtue! all the paſt:
For thee, fair Virtue! welcome ev'n the laſt!
A. But why inſult the poor, affront the great?
P. A knave's a knave, to me, in ev'ry ſtate:
Alike my ſcorn, if he ſucceed or fail,
Sporus at court, or Japhet in a jail,
A hireling ſcribler, or a hireling peer,
Knight of the poſt corrupt, or of the ſhire;
If on a Pillory, or near a Throne,
He gain his Prince's ear, or loſe his own.
Yet ſoft by nature, more a dupe than wit,
Sappho can tell you how this man was bit:
This dreaded Sat'riſt Dennis will confeſs

VARIATIONS.

VER. 368. in the MS.

Once, and but once, his heedleſs youth was bit,
And lik'd that dang'rous thing, a female wit:
Safe as he thought, tho' all the prudent chid;
He writ no Libels, but my Lady did:
Great odds in am'rous or poetic game,
Where Woman's is the ſin, and Man's the ſhame.

NOTES.

VER. 357. Perhaps, yet vibrates) What force and elegance of expreſſion! which, in one word, conveys to us the phyſical effects of ſound, and the moral effects of an often repeated ſcandal.

VER. 359. For thee, fair Virtue! welcome ev'n the laſt!) This line is remarkable for preſenting us with the moſt amiable image of ſteddy Virtue, mixed with a modeſt concern for his being forced to undergo the ſevereſt proofs of his love for it, which was the being thought hardly of by his SOVEREIGN.

Foe to his pride, but friend to his diſtreſs:
So humble, he has knock'd at Tibbald's door,
Has drunk with Cibber, nay has rhym'd for Moor.
Full ten years ſlander'd, did he once reply?
Three thouſand ſuns went down on Welſted's lye.
To pleaſe a Miſtreſs one aſpers'd his life;
He laſh'd him not, but let her be his wife:
Let Budgel charge low Grubſtreet on his quill,
And write whate'er he pleas'd, except his Will;
Let the two Curls of Town and Court, abuſe
His father, mother, body, ſoul, and muſe.

NOTES.

VER. 374. ten years) It was ſo long after many libels before the Author of the Dunciad publiſhed that poem, till when, he never writ a word in anſwer to the many ſcurrilities and falſehoods concerning him. P.

VER. 375. Welſted's lye.) This man had the impudence to tell in print, that Mr. P. had occaſioned a Lady's death, and to name a perſon he never heard of. He alſo publiſh'd that he libell'd the Duke of Chandos; with whom (it was added) that he had lived in familiarity, and received from him a preſent of five hundred pounds: the falſehood of both which is known to his Grace. Mr. P. never received any preſent, farther than the ſubſcription for Homer, from him, or from Any great Man whatſoever. P.

VER. 378. Let Budgel) Budgel, in a weekly pamphlet called the Bee, beſtowed much abuſe on him, in the imagination that he writ ſome things about the Laſt Will of Dr. Tindal, in the Grubſtreet Journal; a Paper wherein he never had the leaſt hand, direction, or ſuperviſal, nor the leaſt knowledge of its Author. P.

VER. 379. except his Will;) Alluding to Tyndall's Will: by which, and other indirect practices, Budgell, to the excluſion of the next heir, a nephew, got to himſelf almoſt the whole fortune of a man entirely unrelated to him.

VER. 381. His father, mother, &c.) In ſome of Curl's and other pamphlets, Mr. Pope's father was ſaid to be a Mechanic,

Yet why? that Father held it for a rule,
It was a ſin to call our neighbour fool;
That harmleſs Mother thought no wife a whore:
Hear this, and ſpare his family, James Moore! 385

a Hatter, a Farmer, nay a Bankrupt. But, what is ſtranger, a Nobleman (if ſuch a reflection could be thought to come from a Nobleman) had dropt an alluſion to that pitiful untruth, in a paper called an Epiſtle to a Doctor of Divinity: And the following line,

Hard as thy Heart, and as thy Birth obſcure, had fallen from a like Courtly pen, in certain Verſes to the Imitator of Horace. Mr. Pope's Father was of a Gentleman's Family in Oxfordſhire, the head of which was the Earl of Downe, whoſe ſole Heireſs married the Earl of Lindſey — His mother was the daughter of William Turnor, Eſq. of York: She had three brothers, one of whom was killed, another died in the ſervice of King Charles; the eldeſt following his fortunes, and becoming a general officer in Spain, left her what eſtate remained after the ſequeſtrations and forfeitures of her family — Mr. Pope died in 1717, aged 75; She in 1733, aged 93, a very few weeks after this poem was finiſhed. NOTES.

VER. 390. A. what fortune, pray?) His friend's perſonating the Town in this place, and aſſuming its impertinent curioſity, gives great ſpirit to the ridicule of the queſtion. — Julian has a parallel ſtroke, in his ſarcaſtic diſcourſe to the people of Antioch, where he tells them a ſtory out of Plutarch, concerning Cato; who, when he came near their City, found their youth under arms, and the magiſtrates in their robes of office. On which alighting, in an ill humour with his friends, who he imagined had informed them of his approach, the maſter of the ceremonies came up, and, advancing before the company, accoſted him in this manner; „Stranger, how far off is Demetrius?„ Now this Demetrius (ſays Julian) was one of Pompey's freedmen, and immenſely rich. You will aſk me what he was worth; for I know nothing ſo likely to excite your curioſity. Why, truly, for this, you muſt conſult Demophilas the Bythinian, whoſe anecdotes turn chiefly upon ſubjects of this high importance.

„O grant me, thus to live, and thus to die!
„Who ſprung from Kings ſhall know leſs joy than I.
„O Friend! may each domeſtic bliſs be thine!
„Be no unpleaſing Melancholy mine:
„Me, let the tender office long engage,
„To rock the cradle of repoſing Age,
„With lenient arts extend a Mother's breath,
„Make Languor ſmile, and ſmooth the bed of Death,
„Explore the thought, explain the aſking eye,
„And keep a while one parent from the ſky!
„On cares like theſe if length of days attend,
„May Heav'n, to bleſs thoſe days, preſerve my friend,
„Preſerve him ſocial, chearful, and ſerene,

REVIEW

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Occasion of publishing these Imitations was the Clamour rais'd on some of my Epistles. An Answer from Horace was both more full, and of more Dignity, than any I could have made in my own person; and the Example of much greater Freedom in so much greater Freedom in so eminent a Divine as Dr. Donne, seem'd a proof with what indignation and contempt a Christian may treat Vice or Folly, in ever so low, or ever so high a Station. Both these Authors were acceptable to the Princes and Ministers under whom they lived. The Satires of Dr. Donne I versified, at the desire of the Earl of Oxford while he was Lord Treasurer, and of the Duke of Shrewsbury, who had been Secretary of State; neither of whom look'd upon a Satire on Vicious Courts as any Reflection on those they serv'd in. And indeed there is not in the world a greater error, than that which Fools are so apt to fall into, and Knaves with good reason to encourage, the mistaking a Satirist for a Libeller; whereas to a true Satirist nothing is so odious as a Libeller, for the same reason as to a man truly virtuous nothing is so hateful as a Hypocrite.

THE

First Satire of the Second Book

IMITATED.

WHOEVER expects a Paraphraſe of Horace, or a faithful Copy of his genius, or manner of writing, in theſe IMITATIONS, will be much diſappointed. Our Author uſes the Roman Poet for little more than his canvas: And if the old deſign or colouring chance to ſuit his purpoſe, it is well: if not, he employs his own, without ſcruple or ceremony. Hence it is, he is ſo frequently ſerious where Horace is in jeſt; and at eaſe where Horace is diſturbed. In a word, he regulates his movements no further on his Original, than was neceſſary for his concurrence, in promoting their common plan of Reformation of manners.

Had it been his purpoſe merely to paraphraſe an ancient Satiriſt he had hardly made choice of Horace; with whom, as a Poet, he held little in common, beſides a comprehenſive knowledge of life and manners, and a certain curious felicity of expreſſion, which conſiſts in uſing the ſimpleſt language with dignity, and the moſt ornamented, with eaſe. For the reſt, his harmony and ſtrength of numbers, his force and ſplendor of colouring, his gravity and ſublime of ſentiment, would have rather led him to another model. Nor was his temper leſs unlike that of Horace, than his talents. What Horace would only ſmile at, Mr. Pope would treat with the grave ſeverity of Perſius: And what Mr. Pope would ſtrike with the cauſtic lightning of Juvenal, Horace would content himſelf in turning into ridicule.

If it be aſked then, why he took any body at all to imitate, he has informed us in his Advertiſement. To which we may add, that this ſort of Imitations, which are of the nature of Parodies, adds reflected grace and ſplendor on original wit. Beſides, he deem'd it more modeſt to give the name of Imitations to his Satires, than, like Deſpreaux, to give the name of Satires to Imitations.

VER. 3. Scarce to wiſe Peter — Chartres) It has been commonly obſerved of the Engliſh, that a Rogue never goes to the Gallows without the pity of the Spectators, and their parting curſes on the rigour of the Laws that brought him thither: and this has been as commonly aſcribed to the good nature of the people. But it is miſtake. The true cauſe is their hatred and envy of power. Their compaſſion for Dunces and Scoundrels (when expoſed by great writers to public contempt, either in juſtice to the age, or in vindication of their own Chracters) has the ſame ſource. They cover their envy to a ſuperior genius, in lamenting the ſeverity of his Pen.

VER. 7. Tim'rous by nature, of the Rich in awe,) The delicacy of this does not ſo much lie in the ironical application of it to himſelf, as in its ſeriouſly characteriſing the Perſon for whoſe advice he applies.

VER. 23. What? like Sir Richard, &c.) Mr. Molyneux, a great Mathematician and Philosopher, had a high opinion of Sir Richard Blackmore's poetic vein. All our English poets, except Milton (says he, in a letter to Mr. Locke) have been mere ballad-makers in comparison of him. And Mr. Locke, in answer to this ob-

Or nobly wild, with Budgel's fire and force,

VER. 39. Abuſe the City's beſt good men in metre,) The beſt good Men, a City phraſe for the richeſt. Metre — not uſed here, purely to help the verſe, but to ſhew what it is a Citizen eſteems the greateſt aggravation of the offence.

VER. 41. What ſhould ail them?) Horace hints at one reaſon, that each fears his own turn may be next; his imitator gives another, and with more art, a reaſon which inſinuates, that his very lenity, in uſing feigned names, increaſes the number of his Enemies.

VER. 46. Darty his Ham-pye;) This Lover of Ham-pye own'd the fidelity of the poet's pencil: and ſaid, he had done juſtice to his taſte; but that if, inſtead of Ham-pye, he had given him Sweet-pye, he never could have pardoned him.

P. 11 Alas! few verſes touch their nicer ear;
They ſcarce can bear their Laureate twice a year;

Like in all elſe, as one Egg to another.

For tho' it may appear odd, that thoſe who come from the ſame Egg ſhould have tempers and purſuits directly contrary; yet there is nothing ſtrange, that two Brothers, alike in all things elſe, ſhould have different amuſements.

VER. 52. As downright Shippen or as old Montagne:) They had this, indeed, in common, to uſe great liberties of ſpeech, and to profeſs ſaying what they thought. Montagne had many qualities, that have gained him the love and eſteem of his Readers: The other had

Perſius alluded to this idea, when he ſaid,

In this impartial glaſs, my Muſe intends
Fair to expoſe myſelf, my foes, my friends;
Publiſh the preſent age; but where my text
Is Vice too high, reſerve it for the next:
My foes ſhall wiſh my life a longer date,
And ev'ry friend the leſs lament my fate.
My head and heart thus flowing thro' my quill,
Verſe-man or Proſe-man, term me which you will.
Papiſt or Proteſtant, or both between,
Like good Eraſmus in an honeſt Mean,
In moderation placing all my glory,
While Tories call me Whig, and Whigs a Tory.
Satire's my weapon, but I'm too diſcreet
To run a muck, and tilt at all I meet;

NOTES.

VER. 64. Verſe-man or Proſe-man, term me which you will, Papiſt or Proteſtant, etc.) The original thought (which is very flat, and ſo ill and aukwardly expreſſed, as to be taken for a monkiſh Addition) is here admirably imitated, in a lively character of himſelf, and his Writings.

VER. 69. Satire's my Weapon.) In theſe Words, our Author has happily explained the true Character of Horace's ironical Apology, which is to this purpoſe: Nature, ſays he, has given all Creatures the means of offence and defence; The wolf has teeth, the bull has horns, and I have a talent for ſatire. And, at the ſame time that he vindicates his claim to this his natural weapon, Satire, he ſhews its moral uſe, it was to oppoſe to the noxious qualities which nature had given Cervius for informing, Canidia for poiſoning, and Turius for paſſing ſentence. The turn of this ludicrous argumentation is fine and delicate; and we find his Imitator ſaw the whole force of it.

VER. 81 — 84. Slander — libell'd by her hate.) There ſeems to be more ſpirit here than in the original. But it is hard to pronounce with certainty. For tho' one may be confident there is more force in the 83d and 84th lines than in yet there might be ſomething, for ought we know, in the Character or Hiſtory of Cervius, which might bring up that line to the ſpirit and poignancy of the 82d verſe of the Imitation.

VER. 84 — 90. It's proper power to hurt, &c.) All, except the two laſt lines, inferior to the elegance and preciſion of the Original.

NOTES

VER. 93 — 96, Whether old age — ſhade) The original is more finiſhed, and even ſublime. Beſides, the laſt verſe — To wrap me in the univerſal ſhade, has a languor and redundancy unuſual with our author.

VER. 97. Whether the darken'd room — Or whiten'd wall —) This is only a wanton joke upon the terms of his Original Quiſquis erit vitæ color.

VER. 99. In durance, exile, Bedlam, or the Mint,) The Poet, in our equal Government, might talk of the diſaſters incident to wit, at his eaſe, and with all this levity of ſtyle. But it was a ſerious matter with Horace; and is ſo ſtill with our witty Neighbours; one of whom has well expreſſed their condition, in the following lines.

Eh! Que ſait-on? Un ſimple badinage,
Mal entendu d'un Prude, ou d'un Sot,

24 Its proper pow'r to hurt, each creature feels;
Bulls aim their horns, and Aſſes lift their heels;
'Tis a Bear's talent not to kick, but hug;
And no man wonders he's not ſtung by Pug.
25 So drink with Walters, or with Chartres eat,
They'll never poiſon you, they'll only cheat.
26 Then, learned Sir! (to cut the matter ſhort)
Whate'er my fate, or well or ill at Court,
Whether Old age, with faint but chearful ray,
Attends to gild the Ev'ning of my day,
Or Death's black wing already be diſplay'd,
To wrap me in the univerſal ſhade;
Whether the darken'd room to muſe invite,
Or whiten'd wall provoke the ſkew'r to write:
In durance, exile, Bedlam, or the Mint,
27 Like Lee or Budgell, I will rhyme and print.
F. 28 Alas young man! your days can ne'er be long,
In flow'r of age you periſh for a ſong!
Plums and Directors, Shylock and his Wife,
Will club their Teſters, now, to take your life!
P. 29 What? arm'd for Virtue when I point the pen,

NOTES.

Peut vous ietter ſur un autre rivage:
Pour perdre un Sage, il ne faut qu'un Bigot.

VER. 104. Will club their Teſters, &c.) The image is exceeding humourous, and, at the ſame time, betrays the injuſtice of their reſentment in the very circumſtance of their indulging it; as it ſhews the Poet had ſaid no more of their avarice, than what was true. Our Author's abundance of Wit has made his readers backward in acknowledging his talent for Humour. But the veins are equally rich; and the one flows with eaſe, and the other is always placed with propriety.

VER. 105 — 120. What? arm'd for Virtue, &c.) This is not only ſuperior to Horace, but equal to any thing in himſelf.

NOTES.

VER. 110. Lights of the Church, or Guardians of the Laws?) Because just Satire is an useful supplement to the sanctions of Law and Religion; and has, therefore, a claim to the protection of those who preside in the administration either of church or state.

VER. 111. Could Boileau — Could Dryden) I believe neither of them would have been suffered to do this, had they not been egregious flatterers of the several Courts to which they belonged.

Ibid. Could pension'd Boileau — Could Laureate Dryden) It was Horace's purpose to compliment the former times, and therefore he gives the virtuous examples of Scipio and Lælius; it was Mr. Pope's, to satirize the present, and therefore he gives the vicious examples of Louis, Charles, and James. Either way the instances are equally pertinent; but in the latter they have rather greater force. Only the line, loses something of its spirit in the imitation; for the amici, referred to, were Scipio and Lælius.

Uni æquus virtuti atque eius amicis,

VER. 116. Unplac'd, unpension'd, no man's heir, or slave?) Mr. Pope, it is well known, made his fortune by his Homers. Lord Treasurer Oxford affected to discourage that design; for so great a Genius (he said) ought not to be confined to Translation. He always used Mr. Pope civilly; and would often express

" Brand the bo'd front of ſhameleſs guilty men;
" Daſh the proud Gameſter in his gilded Car;
" Bare the mean Heart that lurks beneath a Star;
" Can there be wanting, to defend Her cauſe,
" Lights of the Church, or Guardians of the Laws?
" Could penſion'd Boileau laſh in honeſt ſtrain
" Flatt'rers and Bigots ev'n in Louis' reign?
" Could Laureate Dryden Pimp and Fry'r engage,
" Yet neither Charles nor James be in a rage?
" And I not 30 ſtrip the gilding off a Knave, his concern that his religion rendered him incapable of a place. At the ſame time, he never ſpoke one word of a penſion. For this offer he was ſolely indebted to the Whig-Miniſters. In the beginning of George I. lord Hallifax, of his own motion, ſent for Mr. Pope, and told him, it had often given him concern that ſo great a Poet had never been diſtinguiſhed; that he was glad it was now in his power to ſerve him; and, if he cared to accept it, he ſhould have a penſion not clogged with any engagements. Mr. Pope thanked him, and deſired time to conſider of it. After three months (having heard nothing further from that Lord) he wrote him a letter to repeat his thanks; in which he took occaſion to mention the affair of the penſion with much indifference. So the thing dropt till Mr. Craggs came into the Miniſtry. The affair of the penſion was then reſumed. And this miniſter, in a very frank and friendly manner, told Mr. Pope, that three hundred pounds a year was then at his ſervice: that he had the management of the ſecret-ſervice money, and could pay him ſuch a penſion, without its being known, or ever coming to account. But now Mr. Pope declined the offer without heſitation: only, in return for ſo friendly a propoſal, he told the Secretary, that if at any time he wanted money he would draw upon him for 100 or 200 l. which liberty, notwithſtanding, he never took. Mr. Craggs more than once preſſed him on this head; and urged the conveniency of a Chariot; which

Primores populi arripuit populumque tributim ;
Scilicet 31 UNI AEQUUS VIRTUTI ATQUE EJUS AMICIS.

Mr. Pope was sensible enough of: But the precariousness of that supply made him very prudently decline the thoughts of an equipage, which it was much better never to set up, than not properly to support.

VER. 133. Envy must own, &c.) Horace makes the point of honour to consist simply in his living familiarly with the Great,

This, all who know me, know; who love me, tell;
And who unknown defame me, let them be

Our poet, more nobly, in his living with them on the footing of an honeſt man. — He prided himſelf in this ſuperiority, as appears from the following words, in a letter to Dr. Swift. „To have pleaſed great men, according to Horace, is a praiſe; „but not to have flattered them, and yet not have diſpleaſed „them, is a greater.„ Let. VII. Jan. 12, 1723.

NOTES.

VER. 146. A man was hang'd &c.) Si mala condiderit — A great French Lawyer explains this matter very truly. „L'Ari-„ſtocratie eſt le Gouvernement qui proſcrit le plus les Ouvrages „ſatiriques. Les Magiſtrats y ſont de petits ſouverains, qui ne „ſont pas aſſez grands pour mepriſer les iniures. Si dans la „Monarchie quelque trait va contre le Monarque, il eſt ſi haut „que le trait n'arrive point juſqu'à lui; un Seigneur Ariſtocrati-„que en eſt percé de part en part. Auſſi les Decemvirs, qui „formoient une Ariſtocratie, punirent-ils de mort les Ecrits Sa-„tiriques." De L'Eſprit des Loix, L. xii. c. 13.

VER. 150. Libels and Satires! lawleſs things indeed! But grave Epiſtles, &c.) The legal obiection is here more juſtly and decently taken off than in the Original. Horace evades the force of it with a quibble, Eſto, ſiquis mala; ſed bona ſi quis.

But the Imitator's grave Epiſtles ſhew the ſatire to be a ſerious reproof, and therefore juſtifiable; which the integer ipſe of the

My Lords the Judges laugh, and you're diſmiſs'd.

VER. 152. F. Indeed?) Hor.

Solventur riſu tabulæ.

Some Critics tell us, it is want of taſte to put this line in the mouth of Trebatius. But our Poet confutes this cenſure, by ſhewing how well the ſenſe of it agrees to his Friend's character. The Lawyer is cautious and fearful; but as ſoon as SIR ROBERT, the Patron both of Law and Goſpel, is named as approving them, he changes his note, and, in the language of old Plouden, owns, the Caſe is altered. Now was it not as natural, when Horace had given a hint that Auguſtus himſelf ſupported him, for Trebatius, a Court Advocate, who had been long a Client to him and his Uncle, to confeſs the Caſe was altered?

VER. 43. Or ev'n to crack live Crawfiſh) There is force and humour in dixerit and parebit, which the imitation does not reach.

And children ſacred held a Martin's neſt,
Till Becca-ficos ſold ſo dev'liſh dear
To one that was, or would have been, a Peer.
15 Let me extol a Cat, on oyſters fed,
I'll have a party at the Bedford-head;
Or ev'n to crack live Crawfiſh recommend;
I'd never doubt at Court to make a friend.
16 'Tis yet in vain, I own, to keep a pother
About one vice, and fall into the other:
Between Exceſs and Famine lies a mean;
Plain, but not ſordid; tho' not ſplendid, clean.
17 Avidien, or his Wife (no matter which,
For him you'll call a 18 dog, and her a bitch)
Sell their preſented partridges, and fruits,
And humbly live on rabbits and on roots:
19 One half-pint bottle ſerves them both to dine,
And is at once their vinegar and wine.
But on ſome 20 lucky day (as when they found
A loſt Bank-bill, or heard their Son was drown'd)
At ſuch a feaſt, 21 old vinegar to ſpare,
Is what two ſouls ſo gen'rous cannot bear:
Oyl, tho' it ſtink, they drop by drop impart,
But ſowſe the cabbage with a bounteous heart.
22 He knows to live, who keeps the middle ſtate,
And neither leans on this ſide, nor on that;
Nor 23 ſtops, for one bad cork, his Butler's pay,

NOTES.

VER. 50. For him you'll call a dog, and her a bitch) Our Poet had the art of giving wit and dignity to his Billingſgate, which Horace ſeems not to have learnt.

VER. 79, 80. The Soul ſubſides, and wickedly inclines — To ſeem but mortal ev'n in ſound Divines.) Horace was an Epicurean, and laughed at the immortality of the ſoul. He therefore deſcribes that languor of the mind proceeding from intemperance, on the idea, and in the Terms of Plato, affigit humo divinæ particulam auræ.

To this his ridicule is pointed. Our Poet, with more ſobriety and judgment, has turned the ridicule, from the Doctrine, which he believed, upon thoſe Preachers of it, whoſe feaſts and com-

The temp'rate sleeps, and spirits light as air.

The Soul subsides, and wickedly inclines

NOTES.

VER. 117, 118. Oh Impudence of wealth! with all thy ſtore,
How dar'ſt thou let one worthy man be poor?)

Cur eget indignus quiſquam, te divite?

is here admirably paraphraſed. And it is obſervable in theſe Imitations, that where our Poet keeps to the ſentiments of Horace, he rather piques himſelf in excelling the moſt finiſhed touches of his Original, than in correcting or improving the more inferior parts. Of this elegance of ambition all his Writings bear ſuch marks, that it gave countenance to an invidious imputation, as if his chief talent lay in copying finely. But if ever there was an inventive genius in Poetry it was Pope's. But his fancy was ſo corrected by his judgment, and his imitation ſo ſpirited by his genius, that what he improved ſtruck the vulgar eye more ſtrongly than what he invented.

VER. 122. As Mo's was, &c.) I think this light ſtroke of ſatire ill placed; and hurts the dignity of the preceding morality. Horace was very ſerious, and properly ſo, when he ſaid,

Oh impudence of wealth! with all thy ſtore,
How dar'ſt thou let one worthy man be poor?
Shall half the [40] new-built churches round thee fall?
Make Keys, build Bridges, or repair White-hall:
Or to thy Country let that heap be lent,
As Mo's was, but not at five per cent.
[41] Who thinks that Fortune cannot change her mind,
Prepares a dreadful jeſt for all mankind.
And [42] who ſtands ſafeſt? tell me, is it he
That ſpreads and ſwells in puff'd Proſperity,
Or bleſt with little, whoſe preventing care
In peace provides fit arms againſt a war?
[43] Thus BETHEL ſpoke, who always ſpeaks his thought,
And always thinks the very thing he ought:
His equal mind I copy what I can,
And as I love, would imitate the Man.
In South-ſea days not happier, when ſurmis'd

cur, Improbe! caræ
Non aliquid patriæ tanto emetiris acervo.

He remembered, and hints with juſt indignation, at thoſe luxurious Patricians of his old party; who, when they had agreed to eſtabliſh a fund in the cauſe of Freedom, under the conduct of Brutus, could never be perſuaded to withdraw from their expenſive pleaſures what was ſufficient for the ſupport of ſo great a cauſe. He had prepared his apology for this liberty, in the preceding line, where he pays a fine compliment to Auguſtus:

quare
Templa ruunt antiqua Deum?

which oblique Panegyric the Imitator has very properly turned into a juſt ſtroke of ſatire.

VER. 133. In South-ſea days not happier, &c.) Mr. Pope had South-ſea ſtock, which he did not ſell out. It was valued at between twenty and thirty thouſand pounds when it fell.

VER. 150. And, what's more rare, a Poet shall say Grace.) The pleasantry of this line consists in the supposed rarity of a Poet's having a table of his own; or a sense of gratitude for the

VER. 165. Well, if the uſe be mine, &c.) In a letter to this Mr. Bethel, of March 20, 1743, he ſays, "My Landlady, Mrs. „Vernon, being dead, this Garden and Houſe are offered me „in ſale; and, I believe (together with the cottages on each „ſide my graſs-plot next the Thames), will come at about a „thouſand pounds. "Pray heav'n it laſt! (cries SWIFT!) as you go on;

VER. 170. Or, in a jointure, vaniſh from the heir;) The expreſſion well deſcribes the ſurprize an heir muſt be in, to find himſelf excluded by that inſtrument which was made to ſecure his ſucceſſion. For Butler humouroufly defines a Jointure to be the act whereby Parents

VER. 10. ev'n in Brunswick's cause. In the former Editions it was, Britain's cause. But the terms are synonymous.

VER. 16. You limp, like Blackmore on a Lord Mayor's horse,) The fame of this heavy Poet, however problematical elsewhere, was universally received in the City of London. His versification is here exactly described: stiff, and not strong; stately and yet dull, like the sober and slow-paced Animal generally employed to mount the Lord Mayor: and therefore here humourously opposed to Pegasus.

VER. 30. Still true to Virtue — with Ariſtippus, or St. Paul,) It was the Poet's purpoſe in this place, to give us the picture of his own mind; not that of Horace's, who tells us, he ſometimes went with Zeno, and ſometimes with Ariſtippus; the extremes of whoſe different ſyſtems Tully thus juſtly cenſures: „Ut quoniam Ariſtippus, quaſi animum nullum habeamus, corpus „ſolum tuetur; Zeno, quaſi corporis ſimus expertes, animum ſo„lum complectitur.„ But neither truth nor decency would ſuffer our Poet to ſay, that, to ſuit himſelf to the times, he went into either of theſe follies. To ſhew us, therefore, he took no more from the Stoics than their ſincerity and warmth for the intereſts of Virtue, he compares himſelf to a friend, in whom he obſerved that warmth. And by joining St. Paul with Ariſtippus he would inſinuate, that he took no more from the Cyrenaic ſect than a charitable compliance to occaſions, for the benefit of his neighbour. Thus in ſerving himſelf of his friend to temper the rigidity of one ſect of philoſophy, while the Apoſtle is employed to rectify the looſeneſs of the other, he brings Mr. Lyttelton and St. Paul acquainted; for thoſe who correct oppoſite extremes muſt needs meet; and ſo we ſee the Patriot in a new point of view; which is, in a virtuous accommodation of himſelf to ſeaſons and circumſtances.

NOTES.

VER. 51. I'll do what Mead —) Mr. Pope highly eſteemed and loved this worthy man, whoſe unaffected humanity and benevolence have ſtifled much of that envy which his eminence in his profeſſion would otherwiſe have drawn out. Speaking of his obligations to this great Phyſician and others of the Faculty, in a Letter to Mr. Allen, about a month before his death, he ſays, „There is no end of my kind treatment from „the Faculty. They are in general the moſt amiable compa„nions, and the beſt friends, as well as the moſt learned Men „I know.„

Know, there are Rhymes, which [24] fresh and fresh apply'd
Will cure the arrant'st Puppy of his Pride.
Be [25] furious, envious, slothful, mad, or drunk,

A Switz, a High-dutch, or a Low-dutch [27] Bear;
All that we ask is but a patient Ear.

"And the first Wisdom, to be Fool no more.

To either India see the Merchant fly,
Scar'd at the spectre of pale Poverty!
See him, with pains of body, pangs of soul,
Burn through the Tropic, freeze beneath the Pole!
Wilt thou do nothing for a nobler end.
Nothing, to make Philosophy thy friend?
To stop thy foolish views, thy long desires,
And [30] ease thy heart of all that it admires?

where Horace makes Poverty pursue, and keep pace with the Miser in his flight.

But what follows,

Wilt thou do nothing, &c.

far surpasses the Original.

VER. 77. Here Wisdom calls: &c. All from hence to v. 110, is a pretty close translation: but in general done with so masterly a spirit, that the Original, tho' one of the most finished passages in Horace, looks only like the imitation of it.

NOTES.

VER. 78. As Gold to Silver, Virtue is to Gold.) This perhaps is the moſt faulty line in the whole collection. The Original is, which only ſays, that as Silver is of leſs value than Gold, ſo Gold is of leſs value than Virtue: in which ſimple inferiority, and not the proportion of it, is implied. For it was as contrary to the Author's purpoſe, as it is to common ſenſe, to ſuppoſe, that Virtue was but juſt as much better than gold, as gold is better than ſilver. Yet Mr. Pope, too attentive to his conſtant object, conciſeneſs, has, before he was aware, fallen into this abſurd meaning. However this, and many other inaccuracies in his works, had been corrected, had he lived; as many, that now firſt appear in this Edition, were actually corrected a little before his death.

Vilius eſt auro argentum, virtutibus aurum.

And here I cannot but do juſtice to one of his many good qualities, a very rare one indeed, and what none but a truly great genius can afford to indulge; I mean his extreme readineſs, and unfeigned pleaſure, in acknowledging his miſtakes: this, with an impatience to reform them, he poſſeſſed in a greater degree, and with leſs affectation than any Man I ever knew.

Here, Wiſdom calls: [31] "Seek Virtue firſt, be bold!
"As Gold to Silver, Virtue is to Gold."
There, London's voice: [32] "Get Money, Money ſtill!
"And then let Virtue follow, if ſhe will."
This, this the ſaving doctrine, preach'd to all,
From [33] low St. James's up to high St. Paul;
From him whoſe [34] quills ſtand quiver'd at his ear,
To him who notches ſticks at Weſtminſter.
Barnard in [35] ſpirit, ſenſe and truth abounds;
"Pray then, what wants he?" Fourſcore thouſand pounds;
A Penſion, or ſuch Harneſs for a ſlave
As Bug now has, and Dorimant would have.
Barnard, thou art a [36] Cit, with all thy worth;
But Bug and D*l, Their Honours, and ſo forth.

VER. 82. From low St. James's up to high St. Paul,) i. e. This is a doctrine in which both Whigs and Tories agree.

VER. 83. From him whoſe quills ſtand quiver'd at his ear,) They who do not take the delicacy of this ſatire, may think the figure of ſtanding quiver'd, extremely hard and quaint; but it has an exquiſite beauty, inſinuating that the pen of a Scrivener is as ready as the quill of a porcupine, and as fatal as the ſhafts of a Parthian. — Quiver'd at his ear, which deſcribes the poſition it is uſually found in, alludes to the cuſtom of the American canibals, who make uſe of their hair (tied in a knot on the top of their heads) for a quiver for their poiſon'd arrows.

VER. 84. notches ſticks) Exchequer Tallies.

VER. 85. Barnard in ſpirit, ſenſe, and truth abounds,) Sir John Barnard. It was the Poet's purpoſe to ſay, that this great man (who does ſo much honour to his Country) had a fine genius, improved and put in uſe by a true underſtanding; and both, under the guidance of an integrity ſuperior to all the temptations of intereſt, honours, or any meaner paſſion. Many events, ſince the paying this tribute to his virtue, have ſhewn how much, and how particularly it was due to him.

VER. 95. Be this thy Screen, and this thy Wall of Brass;)
Hic murus aheneus esto.

Dacier laughs at an able Critic, who was scandalized, that the antient Scholiasts had not explained what Horace meant by a wall of brass; for, says Dacier, „Chacun se fait des difficultez „à sa mode, & demande des remarques proportionnées à son „goût: „ he then sets himself in good earnest about this im-

VER. 97. And ſay, &c.) Theſe four lines are greatly ſuperior to any thing in the Original.

Notes.

VER. 117. Full many a Beaſt goes in, but none come out.) This expreſſion is uſed for the joke's ſake; but it hurts his moral; which is, that they come out beaſts. He ſhould here have ſtuck to the terms of his Original, veſtigia omnia te adverſum ſpectantia.

VER. 118. Adieu to Virtue, &c.) Theſe two lines are intended for the application or moral of a fable, which needed no explaining; ſo that, they impair the grace of it, at beſt, inferior to his Original. For Horace ſpeaks of the common people, Populus Romanus, to whom one of Æſop's Fables was properly addreſſed: but, this is too ſimple a method of conveying truth to the well-dreſt Rabble of St. James's.

VER. 124. Alike in nothing but one Luſt of Gold, Juſt half the land would buy, and half be ſold:) Here the argument ſuffers a little for the ſake of the ſatire. The reaſon why the People ſhould not be followed is becauſe.

ſays, they all go on one common principle, the luſt of gold. This inaccuracy, tho' Horace has a little of it, yet he has however artfully diſguiſed it, by ſpeaking of the various objects of this one Paſſion, avarice, as of ſo many various paſſions,

Pars hominum geſtit conducere publica: ſunt qui, &c.

but his imitator has unwarily drawn them to a point, by the introductory addition of the two lines above, VER. 126. Their Country's wealth our mightier Miſers drain,) The undertakers for advancing Loans to the Public on the Funds. They have been commonly accuſed of making it a job. But in ſo corrupt times, the fault is not always to be imputed to a Miniſtry: it having been found, on trial, that the wiſeſt and moſt virtuous citizen of this or any other age, with every requiſite talent in ſuch matters, and ſupported by all the weight an honeſt Adminiſtration could afford him, was, they ſay, unable to aboliſh this inveterate myſtery of iniquity.

VER. 143. Now let ſome whimſy, &c.) This is very ſpirited, but much inferior to the elegance of the original, which alluding to the religious manners of that time, no modern imitation can reach.

VER. 155. They change their weekly Barber, &c.) Theſe ſix lines much more ſpirited than the original. In Horace, the people's inconſtancy of temper is ſatirized only in a ſimple expoſure of the caſe. Here the ridicule on the folly is heightened by an humourous picture of the various objects of that inconſtancy.

VER. 3. dear MURRAY,) This Piece is the moſt finiſhed of all his imitations, and executed in the manner the Italian Painters call con amore. By which they mean, the exertion of that principle, which puts the faculties on the ſtretch, and produces the ſupreme degree of excellence. For the Poet had all the warmth of affection for the great Lawyer to whom it is addreſſed: and, indeed, no man ever more deſerved to have a Poet for his friend. In the obtaining of which, as neither Vanity, Party, nor Fear, had any ſhare; ſo he ſupported his title to it by all the offices of true Friendſhip.

tator has judiciouſly expreſſed it in the more ſublime figurative terms of Stars that riſe and fall,

by whoſe courſes the ſeaſons are marked and diſtinguiſhed.

VER. 8. truſt the Ruler with his ſkies, To him commit the hour,) Our Author, in theſe imitations, has been all along careful to correct the looſe morals, and abſurd divinity of his Original.

VER. 10. And view this dreadful All without a fear.) He has added this idea to his text; and it greatly heightens the dignity of the whole thought. He gives it the appellation of a dreadful All, becauſe the immenſity of God's creation, which modern philoſophy has ſo infinitely enlarged, is apt to affect narrow minds, who meaſure the divine comprehenſion by their own, with dreadful ſuſpicions of man's being overlooked in this dark and narrower corner of exiſtence, by a Governor occupied and buſied with greater matters.

NOTES.

VER. 21. In either caſe, believe me, we admire;) i.e. These objects, in either caſe, affect us, as objects unknown affect the mind, and conſequently betray us into falſe judgments.

VER. 22. Whether we joy or grieve, the ſame the curſe, Surpriz'd at better, or ſurpriz'd at worſe.) The elegance of this is ſuperior to the Original. The curſe is the ſame (ſays he) whether we joy or grieve. Why ſo? Becauſe, in either caſe, the man is ſurprized, hurried off, and led away captive.

(The good or bad to one extreme betray
Th' unbalanc'd Mind, and ſnatch the Man away.)

This happy advantage, in the imitation, ariſes from the ambiguity of the word ſurprize.

VER. 27. The worſt of Madmen is a Saint run mad.) Becauſe when men are carried away by their paſſions, as all Madmen are, he, who has joined the Cauſe of God to his own, muſt need do the moſt miſchief, as this Union gives him additional vigour in the purſuit of his extravagances.

VER. 29. reflected Plate) This epithet conveys a fine ſtroke of ſatire; it inſinuates, that the enamoured poſſeſſor, half aſhamed of his paſſion, obliquely eyes his plate from the reflec-

Or 5 Popularity? Or Stars and Strings?

And pay the Great our homage of Amaze?
If weak the 7 pleaſure that from theſe can ſpring,

Whether we dread, or whether we deſire,
In either caſe, believe me, we admire;
Whether we 8 joy or grieve, the ſame the curſe,
Surpriz'd at better, or ſurpriz'd at worſe.
Thus good or bad, to one extreme betray
Th'unbalanc'd Mind, and ſnatch the Man away;
For 9 Virtue's ſelf may too much zeal be had;
The worſt of Madmen is a Saint run mad.

VER. 30. Procure a TASTE to double the ſurprize.) This is one of thoſe ſuperior touches that moſt enoble a perfect piece. He ſpeaks here of falſe taſte, as appears by his directions how to get it, and how to uſe it when got. Procure a taſte, ſays he. That is, of the Virtuoſi; whoſe ſcience you are to buy for that purpoſe: for true taſte, which is from nature, comes of itſelf. And how are you to uſe it? Not to cure you of that bane of life, admiration, but to raiſe and inflame it, by doubling your ſurprize. And this a falſe taſte will always do; there being none ſo given to raptures as the Virtuoſo-Tribe: whereas the Man of true taſte finds but few things to approve; and thoſe he approves with moderation.

VER. 44. Yet Time ennobles, or degrades each Line; It brighten'd Craggs's, and may darken thine :) One of the nobleſt houſes in Europe. — The Original is,

Quicquid ſub terra eſt, in apricum proferet aetas;
Defodiet, condetque nitentia.

This wants neither force nor elegance ; yet is vaſtly inferior to the imitation, where a very fine panegyric on two great Characters, in the ſecond line, gives dignity and eaſe to the maſterly conciſeneſs of the firſt.

And gaze on [11] Parian Charms with learned eyes:

But wherefore all this labour, all this ſtrife?
For [15] Fame, for Riches, for a noble Wife?
Shall [16] One whom Nature, Learning, Birth conſpir'd
To form, not to admire but be admir'd
Sigh, while his Chloe blind to Wit and Worth
Weds the rich Dulneſs of ſome Son of earth?
Yet [17] Time ennobles, or degrades each Line;
It brighten'd CRAGG's and may darken thine:

VER. 53. TULLY, HYDE!) Equal to either in the miniſtry of his Profeſſion. In this, indeed, the Parallel fails. Tully's brighteſt talents were frequently tarniſhed by vanity and fear; and Hyde's moſt virtuous purpoſes perverted by miſtaken ſpeculations concerning the nature of Government and the origine of Society.

One who believes as Tindal leads the way,
Who Virtue and a Church alike disowns,
Thinks that but words, and this but brick and stones?
Fly [23] then, on all the wings of wild desire,
Admire whate'er the maddest can admire:
Is Wealth thy passion? Hence! from Pole to Pole,
Where winds can carry, or where waves can roll,
For Indian spices, for Peruvian Gold,
Prevent the greedy, and out-bid the bold:
[24] Advance thy golden Mountain to the skies;
On the broad base of fifty thousand rise,
Add one round hundred, and (if that's not fair)
Add fifty more, and bring it to a square.
For, mark th'advantage; just so many score
Will gain a [25] Wife with half as many more,
Procure her beauty, make that beauty chaste,
And then such [26] Friends — as cannot fail to last.

VER. 86. Or if three Ladies like a luckleſs Play,) The common reader, I am ſenſible, will be always more ſolicitous about the names of theſe three Ladies, the unlucky Play, and every other trifling circumſtance that attended this piece of gallantry, than for the explanation of our Author's ſenſe, or the illuſtration of his poetry; even where he is moſt moral and ſublime. But had it been in Mr. Pope's purpoſe to indulge ſo impertinent because their impatience under reproof would shew, they had a great deal which wanted to be set right.

So much the better, you may laugh the more.

On this principle, Swift falls under his correction. He could not bear to see a Friend he so much valued, live in the miserable abuse of one of Nature's best gifts, unadmonished of his folly. Swift (as we may see by some posthumous Volumes, lately published, so dishonourable and injurious to his memory) trifled away his old age in a dissipation that women and boys might be ashamed of. For when men have given into a long habit of

FIRST EPISTLE OF THE SECOND BOOK
HORACE.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Reflections of Horace, and the Judgments paſt in his Epiſtle to Auguſtus, ſeem'd ſo ſeaſonable to the preſent Times, that I could not help applying them to the uſe of my own Country. The Author thought them conſiderable enough to addreſs them to his Prince; whom he paints with all the great and good qualities of a Monarch, upon whom the Romans depended for the Encreaſe of an Abſolute Empire. But to make the Poem entirely Engliſh, I was willing to add one or two of thoſe which conrribure to the Happineſs of a Free People, and are more conſiſtent with the Welfare of our Neighbours.

This Epiſtle will ſhew the learned World to have fallen into Two miſtakes: one, that Auguſtus was a Patron of Poets in general; whereas he not only prohibited all but the Beſt Writers to name him, but recommended that Care even to the Civil Magiſtrate: Admonebat Praetores, ne paterentur Nomen ſuum obſoleſcere, &c. The other, that this Piece was only a general Diſcourſe of Poetry; whereas it was an Apology for the Poets, in order to render Auguſtus more their Patron. Horace here pleads the Cauſe of his Cotemporaries, firſt againſt the Taſte of the Town, whoſe humour it was to magnify the Authors of the preceding Age; ſecondly againſt the Court and Nobility, who encouraged only the Writers for the Theatre; and laſtly againſt the Emperor himſelf, who had conceived them of little Uſe to the Government. He ſhews (by a View of the Progreſs of Learning, and the Change of Taſte among the Romans) that the Introduction of the Polite Arts of Greece had given the Writers of his Time great advantages over their Predeceſſors; that their Morals were much improved, and the Licence of thoſe ancient Poets reſtrained: that Satire and Comedy were become more juſt and uſeful; that whatever extravagancies were left on the Stage, were owing to the Ill Taſte of the Nobility; that Poets, under due Regulations, were in many respects useful to the State, and concludes, that it was upon them the Emperor himself must depend, for his Fame with Posterity.

We may farther learn from this Epistle, that Horace made his Court to this Great Prince by writing with a decent Freedom toward him, with a just Contempt of his low Flatterers, and with a manly Regard to his own Character. P.

NOTES.

VER. 68. Beſtow a Garland only on a Bier.) The thought is beautiful, and alludes to the old practice of our Anceſtors, of covering the Bier (on which the dead were carried to their interment) with Garlands. A manly and pious cuſtom, which aroſe from the ancient practice of rewarding victors; and from thence was brought into the Church, and applied to thoſe who had fought the good fight of the Apoſtle.

VER. 69. Shakeſpear.) Shakeſpear and Ben Johnſon may truly be ſaid not much to have thought of this Immortality; the one in many pieces compoſed in haſte for the Stage; the other in his latter works in general, which Dryden call'd his Dotages. P.

Ibid. Shakeſpear — For gain not glory, &c.) SHAKESPEAR knew perfectly well what belonged to a true compoſition, as appears from the Tempeſt, and the Merry Wives of Windſor. But he generally complied with the ignorance, and the ill taſte of his Audience. However, in his moſt irregular plays his wit and ſublimity make amends for his tranſgreſſion of the rules of art; and ſupport him in it. But, happily for the improvement of the Drama, he had a competitor in JOHNSON, who, with a greater temptation to comply with the bad taſte of the age, had not the ſame force of genius to ſupport him in it. Johnſon, therefore, borrowed all he could from art; and like an experienced general, when he could not depend on his natural ſtrength, kept ſtill behind his lines. The conſequence was, that Shakeſpear having once tried to reform the taſte (See Hamlet) and on failing, had complied with it, became the favourite Poet of the People; while Johnſon, who, for the reaſon given above, could not be ſo complaiſant, was all his life long in a ſtate of war with them. This, and not (as is commonly ſuppoſed) the ignorance of one, and the ſuperior knowledge of the other, was the true cauſe of that difference which we find between theſe two Capital Writers, in the art and conſtruction of their pieces. So that here, we ſee, a want of ſufficient natural genius accidentally contributed to the refinement of the Engliſh ſtage.

"We ſhall not quarrel for a year or two;
"By [19] courteſy of England, he may do.

Ibid. and ev'ry Playhouſe bill) A ridicule on thoſe who talk of Shakeſpear, becauſe he is in faſhion; who, if they dared to do juſtice, to their taſte or conſcience, would own they liked Durfey better.

The preſent faſhion for Milton makes us as ready to learn our religion from the Paradiſe loſt: tho' it be certain, he was as poor and fanciful a Divine, as Shakeſpear was a licentious Hiſtorian. This appears from many places of that admirable Poem. As he here degrades the Father by making him follow the School-ſyſtems; ſo, in his Paradiſe regained, he diſho-

VER. 104. Bentley) This excellent critic, who had the fortune to be extravagantly deſpiſed and ridiculed by two of the greateſt wits, and as extravagantly feared and flattered by two of the greateſt Scholars of his time, will deſerve to have that juſtice done him now, which he never met with while alive.

other deſign than to correct the errors of the text. For this he had a ſtrong natural underſtanding, a great ſhare of penetration, and a ſagacity and acumen very uncommon. All which qualities he had greatly improved by long exerciſe and application. Yet, at the ſame time, he had ſo little of that elegance of judgment, we call Taſte, that he knew nothing of Style, as it accommodates itſelf, and is appropriated to the various kinds of compoſition. And his reaſoning faculty being infinitely better than that of his Imagination, the ſtyle of poetry was what he the leaſt underſtood So that, that clearneſs of conception, which ſo much aſſiſted his critical ſagacity, in diſcovering and reforming errors in books of ſcience, where a philoſophical preciſion, and grammatical exactneſs of language is employed, ſerved but to betray him into abſurd and extravagant coniectures when ever he attempted to reform the text of a Poet, whoſe diction he was always for deducing to the proſaic rules of logical ſeverity; and whenever he found what a great maſter of ſpeech calls verbum ardens, he was ſure not to leave it till he had thoroughly quenched it in his critical ſtandiſh. But to make philologic amends, he was a perfect maſter of all the myſteries of the ancient Rythmus.

The moſt important of his works, as a ſcholar, is his Critic on the Epiſtles of Phalaris: and the leaſt conſiderable, his Remarks on the Diſcourſe concerning Free-thinking. Yet the firſt, with all its ſuperiority of Learning, Argument, and Truth, was borne down by the vivacity and clamour of a Party, which (as uſual) carried the Public along with them: while the other, employed only in the eaſy and trifling taſk of expoſing a very dull and very ignorant Rhapſodiſt, was as extravagantly extolled. For it was his odd fortune (as our Poet expreſſes it) to paſs for amongſt his friends, of the blind partiality of the public in the latter, with the contempt it deſerved. For however he might ſometime miſtake his fort, he was never the dupe of the Public judgment. Of which a learned Prelate, now living, gave me this inſtance: He accidentally met Bentley in the days of Phalaris; and after having complimented him on that noble piece of Criticiſm (the Anſwer to the Oxford writers) he bad him not be diſcouraged at this run upon him: for tho' they had got the laughers on their ſide, yet mere wit and raillery could not hold it out long againſt a work of ſo much merit. To which the other replied, „Indeed, Dr. S. I am in no pain about the matter. For „it is my maxim, that no man was ever written out of reputa-„tion, but by himſelf.„

Ibid. his deſp'rate book) Alluding to the ſeveral paſſages of Milton, which Bentley has reprobated, by including within hooks, ſome with judgment, and ſome without.

VER. 108. The Mob of Gentlemen who wrote with Eaſe;) The Poet has here very happily exemplified this envied quality of eaſy writing in the turn of the verſes that expoſe it. Theſe wits formed themſelves, for the moſt part, on Suckling, a fine original genius. But on ſo ſlippery a ground it was no wonder ſuch Imitators ſhould fall; and either ſink his free and eaſy manner into inſipidity, or abuſe it to ribaldry and licentiouſneſs: they did both; till eaſy writing came to be defined a negligence of what they ſaid, and how they ſaid it. This was called writing like a Gentleman. But as faſhions take their turn, Lord Shafteſbury has introduced a new ſort of Gentleman-like writing, which conſiſts indeed, like the other, in a negligence of what is ſaid, but joined to much affectation in the manner of ſaying it.

VER. 109. Sprat,) Rightly put at the head of the ſmall wits. He is now known to moſt advantage as the friend of Mr. Cowley. His Learning was compriſed in the well rounding a period: For,

NOTES.

Apol. for his life, p. 88. Ed. Oct. — If the Audience were in raptures, I admire their good taſte: for, I think, theſe ſix lines are as truly ſublime as any thing we have in the Engliſh Language. But the Critic is for having the images they convey painted. And, it muſt be owned, this is no ill teſt of diſtinguiſhing ſound from ſubſtance. He is indeed a little miſtaken in his Painter, as the Connoiſſeurs will tell him. For this ſubject demands the genius of Rubens rather than Le Brun. And, from ſuch a one, he might have a very good picture for his money. He ſeems not to have reflected that Fortune and the Fates tho' imaginary, are yet perſonified Beings. And Glory, here, is ſomething more ſubſtantial; for by the line, is meant that Glory appear'd in the ſhape of an Eagle on his creſt.

When Glory, like the dazzling Eagle, ſtood, &c.

The truth is, theſe ſix lines, unluckily for the Laureate's criticiſm, contain not only the moſt ſublime but the moſt judicious imagery that poetry could conceive or paint. The firſt line alludes to the tradition of an Eagle's hovering over Alexander's head, at the battle of Arbela, as a preſage of Victory; Lee, I ſuppoſe, might think himſelf at liberty to transfer it to the paſſage of the Granicus; and this the poet has made the ground of his fine imagination, of Glory in the ſhape of an Eagle, in the ſtyle of Homer, who repreſents Terror, Affright, and a number of ſuch fantaſtic Beings, ſwarming on the creſts of his heroes.

The repreſenting Fortune, in the third line, as his ſtandard-bearer, is very happy. It is not only in the true ſpirit of poetry, but it gives us a right idea of the nature of his Aſiatic expedition; and the making her tremble, as ſhe diſplayed it, in the paſſage of the Granicus, the juſteſt notion of the exceeding raſhneſs of that adventure.

Which 43 Betterton's grave action dignify'd,
Or well-mouth'd Booth with emphasis proclaims,
(Tho' but, perhaps, a muster-roll of Names)
How will our Fathers rise up in a rage,
And swear, all shame is lost in George's Age!
You'd think 44 no Fools disgrac'd the former reign,

NOTES.

The fourth line greatly heightens all these images, by making the Fates themselves (who had destined the Persian empire to destruction, and called Alexander out of Greece to execute their decrees) as half afraid that this desperate Madman would frustrate their purpose.

But the sublime of the two last verses exceeds all the rest. They are a beautiful allusion to the battle of Scamander in Homer, where Achilles led on the Gods themselves to the destruction of Troy, thro' the billows of that River, which opposed their passage. And the exquisite judgment of the Poet in this allusion is seen by those, who have heard that Achilles was Alexander's model of Heroism, and Homer his favourite Historian. Lastly, as to the propriety of Alexander's thus extolling his own actions, the poet is justified by Q. Curtius, from whom we learn that it was his custom.

From what has been said, we may collect how dangerous it is for a writer to give his opinion out of his own Profession, how well soever he may succeed within it. For this justice is due to the Laureate, that that part of his book, where he has drawn the characters of the set of Players on whom he formed himself, or whom he emulated, and that, with a performance equal to the most perfect of theirs, is indeed (bating the singularity of his phrase) a Master-piece in its kind. So necessary was that ancient direction

VER. 122. Which Betterton's grave action dignify'd, Or well-mouth'd Booth) The epithet gravis, when applied to a Tragedian, signifies dignity of gesture and action; and in this sense the imitator uses the word grave: nothing being more destructive of his character than ranting, the common vice of Stage-

The epithet well mouth'd, a term of the chace, here applied to his ſucceſſor, was not given without a particular deſign, and to inſinuate, that there was as wide a difference between their performances, as there is between ſcientific muſic, and the harmony of brute ſounds, between elocution and vociferation. VER. 146. And ev'ry flow'ry Courtier writ Romance.) The riſe and progreſs of the ſeveral branches of literary Science is one of the moſt curious parts of the hiſtory of the human mind and yet is that which amongſt us is leaſt attended to. This of fictitious hiſtory is not below our notice. The cloſe connexion which every individual has with all that relates to MAN in general ſtrongly inclines us to turn our obſervation upon human affairs, in preference to other attentions, and eagerly to wait the progreſs and iſſue of them. But as the courſe of human actions is too ſlow to gratify our curioſity, obſervant men very early contrived to ſatisfy its impatience by the invention of hiſtory. Which by recording the principal circumſtances of paſt Facts, and laying them cloſe together, in a continued narration, kept the mind from languiſhing, and gave conſtant exerciſe to its reflections.

But as it commonly happens, that in all indulgent refinements on our ſatisfactions, the Procurers to our pleaſures run into exceſs; ſo it happened here. Strict matters of fact, however delicately dreſſed up, ſoon grew to ſimple and inſipid to a taſte ſtimulated by the luxury of art: They wanted ſomething of more poignancy to quicken and enforce a jaded appetite. Hence in the politer ages thoſe feigned hiſtories relating the quick turns of capricious Fortune; and, in the more barbarous, the ROMANCES, abounding with the falſe provocative of inchantment and miraculous adventures.

But ſatiety, in things unnatural, brings on diſguſt. And the reader at length began to ſee that too eager a purſuit after adventures had drawn him from, what firſt engaged his attention, MAN and his ways, into the Fairy walks of Monſters and Chimera's. And now thoſe who had run furtheſt after theſe deluſions, were the firſt that recovered themſelves. For the next ſpecies of fiction, which took its name from its NOVELTY, was of Spaniſh invention. Theſe preſented us with ſomething of humanity; but in a forced unnatural ſtate. For as every thing before was conducted by Necromancy, ſo all now was managed by intrigue. And tho' it had indeed a kind of life, it had yet, as in its infancy, nothing of manners. On which account thoſe who could not penetrate into the ill conſtitution of its plan, yet grew diſguſted at the dryneſs of the Conduct, and want of eaſe in the Cataſtrophe.

The avoiding theſe defects gave riſe to the HEROICAL ROMANCES of the French, here ridiculed by our Poet; in which ſome celebrated ſtory of antiquity was ſo polluted by modern fable and invention, as was juſt enough to ſhew that the contrivers of them neither knew how to lye nor ſpeak truth. In theſe voluminous extravagances, Love and Honour ſupplied the place of Life and Manners. But the over-refinement of Platonic ſentiments always ſinks into the dregs of the gentle paſſion. Thus in attempting a more natural repreſentation of it in the little AMATORY NOVELS which ſucceeded thoſe heavier volumes, tho' the writers avoided the dryneſs of the Spaniſh Intrigue; and the extravagance of the French Heroiſm. yet, by giving too natural a picture of their ſubject, they introduced a worſe evil than a corruption of Taſte, and that was a corruption of Heart.

At length this great People (to whom, it muſt be owned, every branch of Science has been infinitely indebted) hit upon the true ſecret, by which alone a deviation from ſtrict fact, in the commerce of Man, could be really amuſing to an improved mind, or uſeful to promote that improvement. And this was by a faithful and chaſte copy of real LIFE AND MANNERS.

In this ſpecies of writing, Mr. De Marivaux in France, and Mr. FIELDING in England ſtand the foremoſt. And by enriching it with the beſt part of the Comic art, may be ſaid to have brought it to its perfection.

VER. 201. Of little use, &c.) There is a poignancy in the following verses, which the original did not aim at, nor affect.

VER. 204. And (tho' no Soldier) Horace had not acquitted himself much to his credit in this capacity (non bene relicta parmula) in the battle of Philippi. It is manifest he alludes to himself, in this whole account of a Poet's character; but with an intermixture of irony: Vivit siliquis & pane secundo has a relation to his Epicurism; Os tenerum pueri, is ridicule: The nobler office of a Poet follows: Torquet ab obscoenis — Mox etiam pectus — Recte facta refert, &c.) which the Imitator has apply'd where

Yet, Sir, [61] reflect, the miſchief is not great;
Theſe Madmen never hurt the Church or State:
Sometimes the Folly benefits mankind;
And rarely [62] Av'rice taints the tuneful mind.

And knows no loſſes while the Muſe is kind.

And then — a perfect hermit in his [66] diet.

the name of Dryden has a great beauty. The Poet's tenderneſs for his Maſter is expreſſed in the ſecond line by making his caſe general; and his honour for him, in the firſt line, by making his caſe particular, as the only one that deſerved pity.

VER. 215. excuſe ſome Courtly ſtrains) We are not underſtand this as a diſapprobation of Mr. Addiſon for celebrating the virtues of the preſent Royal Family. It relates to a certain circumſtance, in which he thought that amiable Poet did not act with the ingenuity that became his character.

When Mr. Addiſon, in the year 1713, had finiſhed his Cato, he brought it to Mr. Pope for his judgment, Our Poet, who thought the ſentiments excellent, but the action not enough theatrical, gave him his opinion fairly, and told him that he had better not bring it upon the Stage, but print it like a claſſical performance, which would perfectly anſwer his deſign. Mr. Addiſon approved of this advice; and ſeemed diſpoſed to follow it. But ſoon after he came to Mr. Pope, and told him, that ſome friends, whom he could not diſoblige, inſiſted on his having it acted. However he aſſured Mr. Pope that it was with no Party views, and deſired him to ſatisfy the Treaſurer and the Secretary in that particular; and at the ſame time gave him the Poem to carry to them for their peruſal. Our Poet executed his commiſſion in the moſt friendly manner; and the Play, and the project for bringing it upon the Stage, had their approbation and encouragement. Throughout the carriage of this whole affair, Mr. Addiſon was ſo exceedingly afraid of party imputations, that when Mr. Pope, at his requeſt, wrote the famous prologue to it, and had ſaid.

„Britons ARISE, be worth like this approv'd,
„And ſhew you have the virtue to be mov'd.

leſs obnoxious. On this account it was altered, as it now ſtands, to — Britons, attend, — though at the expence both of the ſenſe and ſpirit. Notwithſtanding this, the very next year, when the preſent illuſtrious Family came to the Succeſſion, Mr. Addiſon thought fit to make a merit of CATO, as purpoſely and directly written to oppoſe to the ſchemes of a faction. His poem, to her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, beginning in this manner,

„The Muſe, that oft with ſacred raptures fir'd
„Has gen'rous thoughts of Liberty inſpir'd:
„And, boldly riſing for Britannia's Laws,
„Ingag'd great Cato in her country's cauſe;
„On you ſubmiſſive waits.

VER. 216. No whiter page than Addiſon remains,) Mr. Addiſon's literary character is much miſtaken, as characters generally are when taken (as his has been) in the groſs. He was but an ordinary poet, and a worſe critic. His verſes are heavy, and his judgment of Men and Books ſuperficial. But in the pleaſantry of comic adventures, and in the dignity of moral allegories, he is inimitable. Nature having joined in him, as ſhe had done once before in Lucian (who wanted the other's wiſdom to make a right uſe of it) the ſublime of Plato to the humour of Menander.

and likewiſe to Mr. Addiſon's papers in the Tatlers, Spectators, and Guardians; the character of which is given in the preceding note. But their excellence may be beſt gathered from their having procured ſo long credit to that vaſt heap of crude and indigeſted things with which they are intermixed.

They ſeemed neceſſary to compleat the Hiſtory of the riſe and progreſs of Wit; and, if attended to, will be ſeen to make much for the argument the Poet is upon, viz. the recommendation of Poetry to the protection of the Magiſtrate. And is, therefore, what Horace would have choſen to ſay, had he reflected on it.

With feaſts, and off'rings, and a thankful ſtrain:
The joy their wives, their ſons, and ſervants ſhare,

The laugh, the jeſt, attendants on the bowl,
Smooth'd ev'ry brow, and open'd ev'ry ſoul:
With growing years the pleaſing Licence grew,

But Times corrupt, and [78] Nature, ill-inclin'd,
Produc'd the point that left a ſting behind;
Till friend with friend and families at ſtrife,

Appeal'd to law, and juſtice lent her arm.
At length, by wholſome [79] dread of ſtatutes bound,
The Poets learn'd to pleaſe and not to wound:

However, it might be ſaid with truth, that our Intrigues on the Continent brought us acquainted with the Provincial Poets, and produced Chaucer. VER. 282. Some doubt, &c.) In Tragedy it is the action, and in Comedy it is the manners, which most engage our attention. But it is easier to direct and conduct an action than to draw and colour manners. Besides, our ignorance of high life makes false manners in Tragedy escape unobserved; but unnatural action in Comedy lies hid from no body. Hence it is, that the difficulty of succeeding lies on the side of the comic writer. To support these observations, let me ask, from whence arises our diſguſt, when the ſcene in Comedy is laid abroad, and that of Tragedy at home. It appears, at firſt ſight, whimſical and capricious, but has its foundation in nature. What we chiefly ſeek in Comedy is a true image of life and manners; but we are not eaſily brought to think we have it given us, when dreſſed in foreign modes and faſhions. And yet a good writer muſt follow his ſcene and obſerve decorum. On the contrary, 'tis the action in Tragedy which moſt engages our attention. But to fit a domeſtic occurrence for the ſtage we muſt take greater liberties with the action than a well known ſtory will allow. Not but perhaps another reaſon might be given for our diſapprobation of this inverted ſtate of the ſcene. Comedy deals much in ſatire, Tragedy in panegyric: and our natural malignity will more eaſily ſuffer us to find the ridiculous at home, than the heroic.—

But Kings in Wit may want diſcerning Spirit.

which the following inſtance will put out of doubt. The famous HUGO GROTIUS had, ſome how or other, ſurprized the world into an early admiration of his parts and virtues. But his Grace the Archbiſhop Abbot was not ro be deceived by dazzling appearances. In one of his Reſcripts to Sir Ralph Winwood, at the Hague, he unmaſks this forward Dutchman, who a little before had been ſent over to England by the States. „You muſt „take heed how you truſt DOCTOR GROTIUS too far, „for I perceive him to be SO ADDICTED TO SOME „PARTIALITIES IN THOSE PARTS, THAT HE „FEARETH NOT TO LASH SO IT MAY SERVE A „TURN. At his firſt coming to the King, by reaſon of his „good Latin tongue, he was ſo tedious and full of tittle-tattle, „that the KING'S judgment was of him that he was ſome PE-„DANT, full of words, and of NO GREAT JUDGMENT. „And I myſelf diſcovering that to be his habit, as if he did ima-„gine that every man was bound to hear him ſo long as he „would talk, did privately give him notice thereof, that he „ſhould plainly and directly deliver his mind, or elſe he would „make the King weary of him. This did not take place but „that afterwards he fell to it again, as was eſpecially obſerved „one night at ſupper at the Lord Biſhop of Ely's, whither being „brought by Mr. Caſaubon (as I think) my Lord intreated him „to ſtay to ſupper, which he did. There was preſent Dr. Stew-„ard and another Civilian, unto whom he flings out ſome que-„ſtion of that profeſſion, and was ſo full of words, that Dr. Stew-„ard afterwards told my Lord, That he did perceive by him,

VER. 405. And I'm not us'd to Panegyric ſtrains;) Archbiſhop Tillotſon hath ſaid, „That ſatire and invective were the „eaſieſt kind of wit, becauſe almoſt any degree of it will ſerve „to abuſe and find fault. For wit (ſays he) is a keen inſtru„ment, and every one can cut and gaſh with it. But to carve „a beautiful image and poliſh it, requires great art and dex„terity. To praiſe any thing well, is an argument of much „more wit than to abuſe; a little wit, and a great deal of „ill-nature, will furniſh a man for ſatire, but the greateſt in„ſtance of wit is to commend well.„ Thus far this candid Prelate. And I, in my turn, might as well ſay, that Satire was the moſt difficult, and Panegyric the moſt eaſy thing in nature;

E'er ſwell'd on marble; as in verſe have ſhin'd
(In poliſh'd verſe) the Manners and the Mind.
Oh! could I mount on the Mæonian wing,
Your [124] Arms, your Actions, your Repoſe to ſing!
What [125] ſeas you travers'd, and what fields you fought!
Your Country's Peace, how oft, how dearly bought!
How [126] barb'rous rage ſubſided at your word,
And Nations wonder'd while they drop'd the ſword!
How, when you nodded, o'er the land and deep,
[127] Peace ſtole her wing, and wrapt the world in ſleep!
'Till earth's extremes your mediation own,
And [128] Aſia's Tyrants tremble at your Throne —
But [129] Verſe, alas! your Majeſty diſdains;
And I'm not us'd to Panegyric ſtrains:
The Zeal of [130] Fools offends at any time,
But moſt of all, the Zeal of Fools in rhyme.
Beſides, a fate attends on all I write,
That when I aim at praiſe, they ſay [131] I bite.
A vile [132] Encomium doubly ridicules:

NOTES.

for that any barber-ſurgeon can curl and ſhave, and give coſmetic-waſhes for the ſkin; but it requires the abilities of an Anatomiſt to diſſect and lay open the whole interior of the human frame. But the truth is, theſe ſimilitudes prove nothing, but the good fancy, or the ill judgment of the uſer. The one is juſt as eaſy to do ill, and as difficult to do well as the other. In our Author's Eſſay on the Characters of Men, the Encomium on Lord Cobham, and the ſatire on Lord Wharton, are the equal efforts of the ſame great genius. There is one advantage indeed in Satire over Panegyric, which every body has taken notice of, that it is more readily received; but this does not ſhew that it is more eaſily written.

There's nothing blackens like the ink of fools.
If true, a [133] woful likeneſs; and if lyes,
"Praiſe undeſerv'd is ſcandal in diſguiſe:"
Well may he [134] bluſh, who gives it, or receives;
And when I flatter, let my dirty leaves

As Euſden, Philips, Settle, writ of Kings)

Befringe the rails of Bedlam and Soho.

VER. 4. This Lad, Sir, is of Blois:) A Town in Beauce, where the French tongue is ſpoken in great purity.

EPISTLE II.

DEAR Col'nel, COBHAM's and your country's Friend!
You love a Verſe, take ſuch as I can ſend.
[1] A Frenchman comes, preſents you with his Boy,
Bows and begins — "This Lad, Sir, is of Blois:
"Obſerve his ſhape how clean! his locks how curl'd!
"My only ſon, I'd have him ſee the world:
"His French is pure; his Voice too — you ſhall hear.
"Sir, he's your ſlave, for twenty pound a year.
"Mere wax as yet, you faſhion him with eaſe,
"Your Barber, Cook, Upholſt'rer, what you pleaſe:
"A perfect genius at an Op'ra-ſong —
"To ſay too much, might do my honour wrong.
"Take him with all his virtues, on my word;
"His whole ambition was to ſerve a Lord;
"But Sir, to you, with what would I not part?
"Tho' faith, I fear, 'twill break his Mother's heart.
"Once (and but once) I caught him in a lye,
"And then, unwhipp'd, he had the grace to cry:
"The fault he has I fairly ſhall reveal,
"(Could you o'erlook but that) it is to ſteal.
[2] If, after this, you took the graceleſs lad,
Could you complain, my Friend, he prov'd ſo bad?
Faith, in ſuch caſe, if you ſhould proſecute,

NOTES.

VER. 15. But, Sir, to you, with what would I not part?) The numbers well expreſs the unwillingneſs of parting with what one can ill ſpare.

NOTES.

VER. 24. I think Sir Godfrey) An eminent Juſtice of Peace, who decided much in the manner of Sancho Pancha. P. Sir Godfrey Kneller.

VER. 33. In Anna's Wars, &c.) Many parts of this ſtory are well told; but, on the whole, it is much inferior to the original.

VER. 37. This put the man, &c.) Greatly below the Original,

Poſt hoc vehemens lupus, & ſibi & hoſti
Iratus pariter, jejunis dentibus acer.

The laſt words are particularly elegant and humourous.

I think Sir Godfrey ſhould decide the ſuit;
Who ſent the Thief that ſtole the Caſh, away,
And puniſh'd him that put it in his way.
3 Conſider then, and judge me in this light;
I told you when I went, I could not write;
You ſaid the ſame: and are you diſcontent
With Laws, to which you gave your own aſſent?
Nay worſe, to aſk for Verſe at ſuch a time!
D'ye think me good for nothing but to rhyme?
4 In ANNA's Wars, a Soldier poor and old
Had dearly earn'd a little purſe of gold:
Tir'd with a tedious march, one luckleſs night,
He ſlept, poor dog! and loſt it, to a doit.
This put the man in ſuch a deſp'rate mind,
Between revenge, and grief, and hunger join'd,
Againſt the foe, himſelf, and all mankind,
He leap'd the trenches, ſcal'd a Caſtle-wall,
Tore down a Standard, took the Fort and all.
"Prodigious well;" his great Commander cry'd,
Gave him much praiſe, and ſome reward beſide.
Next pleas'd his Excellence a town to batter;
(Its name I know not, and its no great matter)
"Go on, my Friend (he cry'd) ſee yonder walls!
"Advance and conquer! go where glory calls!
"More honours, more rewards, attend the brave."
Don't you remember what reply he gave?

NOTES.

VER. 43. Gave him much praiſe, and ſome reward beſide.) For the ſake of a ſtroke of ſatire, he has here weakened that circumſtance, on which the turn of the ſtory depends. Horace avoided it, tho' the avaricious character of Lucullus was a tempting occaſion to indulge his raillery.

„Poſt haec ille catus, quantumvis ruſticus,„ "Ibit, „"Ibit eo, quo vis, qui zonam perdidit, inquit.
5 Romae nutriri mihi contigit, atque doceri,

NOTES.

VER. 51. Let him take caſtles who has ne'er a groat.) This has neither the force nor the juſtneſs of the original. Horace makes his Soldier ſay,

Ibit,
Ibit eo, quo vis, qui zonam perdidit.

for it was not his poverty, but his loſs, that puſhed him upon danger; many being equal to the one, who cannot bear the other. What betray'd our poet into this inaccuracy of expreſſion was its ſuiting better with the application. But in a great writer we pardon nothing. And ſuch ſhould never forget, that the expreſſion is not perfect, but when the ideas it conveys fit both the tale and the application: for then, they reflect mutual light upon one another.

VER. 52. Bred up at home, &c.) The Reader may poſſibly have a curioſity to know ſomething more of Mr. Pope's education than what this verſe tells him; and tho' much more would be too trifling to enter into a juſt volume of his life, it may do no diſhonour to one of theſe curſory notes. He was taught his letters very early by an Aunt; and, from thence, to his eighth year, he took great delight in reading. He learn'd to write of himſelf by copying after printed books, whoſe characters he brought himſelf to imitate in great perfection. At eight, he was put under one Taverner, a Prieſt, who taught him the rudiments of the Latin and Greek tongues, together. From him, in a little time, he was ſent to a private ſchool at Twiford near Wincheſter. Here, he continued about a year, and was then removed to another, near Hyde-park Corner. Under theſe two laſt Maſters he loſt the little he had got under the Prieſt. At Twelve, he went with his Father into the Foreſt; where he was, for a few months, under another Prieſt, and with as little ſucceſs as before. For, as he uſed to ſay, he never could learn any thing which he did not purſue with pleaſure. And theſe miſerable pedants had not the art of making his ſtudies an amuſement to him. Upon the remnants, therefore, of this ſmall ſtock, ſo hardly picked up, ſo

"D'ye think me, noble Gen'ral, ſuch a Sot?
"Let him take caſtles who has ne'er a groat."
Bred up at home, full early I begun

eaſily loſt, and recovered (as we ſhall ſee) with ſo much labour, he at length thought fit to become his own maſter. And now the only method of ſtudy he preſcribed to himſelf was reading thoſe claſſic writers, who afforded him moſt entertainment. So that while he was intent upon the ſubject, with a ſtrong appetite for Knowledge, and an equal paſſion for Poetry, he inſenſibly got Latin and Greek. And, what was extraordinary, his impatience of reſtraint, in the uſual forms, did not hinder his ſubjecting himſelf, now he was his own maſter, to all the drudgery and fatigue of perpetually recurring to his Grammar and Lexicon. By the time he was fifteen he had acquired a very ready habit in the learned languages; when a ſtrong fancy came into his head to remove to London, to learn French and Italian. His Family (whoſe only object was the preſervation of his miſerably infirm body) regarded it as a very wild project. But he perſiſted in it, and they gave way: to town he went; and maſtered thoſe two languages with ſurprizing diſpatch. The whole treaſure of Parnaſſus now lay open to him; and, between this and his twentieth year, his conſtant employment was reading the moſt conſiderable poets and critics in the Greek, Latin, French, Italian, and Engliſh languages. But, all this, without much order, as chance threw them in his way, or the caprice of deſultory reading directed his choice. This being one continued indulgence of his curioſity or amuſement, made him always ſpeak of theſe four or five years as the moſt pleaſurable part of his life.

Yet his true underſtanding would not ſuffer him to continue long eaſy under ſo defective an education. For a vaſt memory, and an accurate judgment, which remedied many of its inconveniences, made him but the more ſenſible of them all. So that, at twenty, when the impetuoſity of his ſpirits began to permit his genius to be put under reſtraint, he went over all the parts of his education a-new, from the very beginning, and in a regular, and more artful manner. He penetrated into the general grounds and reaſons of ſpeech; he learnt to diſtinguiſh the ſeveral ſpecies of ſtyle; he ſtudied the peculiar genius and character of each language; he reduced his natural talent for poetry to a ſcience, and maſtered thoſe parts of philoſophy that would moſt contribute to enrich his vein. And all this, with ſuch continued attention, labour, and ſeverity, that he uſed to ſay, he had been ſeven years (that is, from twenty to twenty-ſeven) in unlearning all he had been acquiring for twice that time.

VER. 53. To read in Greek the wrath of Peleus' ſon.) This circumſtance has a happier application in the imitation than in the original; and properly introduces the 68th verſe.

VER. 65. He ſtuck to poverty with peace of mind.) There was ſomething very ſingular in the Oeconomy of Mr. Pope's father. He was a Merchant, and lived in London. At the Revolution he left off trade, and converted his effects in money, amounting to between fifteen and twenty thouſand pounds, with which he retired into the country. As he was a Papiſt, he could not purchaſe, nor put his money to intereſt on real ſecurity; and as he adhered to the intereſts of King James, he made a point of conſcience not to lend it to the new Government: ſo he kept it VER. 68. But (thanks to Homer) &c.) He began the Iliad at twenty-five, and finiſhed it in five years. It was publiſhed for his own benefit by ſubſcription. He ſold it to Lintot the Bookſeller, on the following terms, Twelve hundred pounds paid down, and all the Books for his Subſcribers. The Odyſſey was publiſhed in the ſame manner, and ſold on the ſame conditions; except only that inſtead of Twelve, he had Six hundred pounds. He was aſſiſted in this latter work by Broome and Fenton, to the firſt of whom he gave Six hundred pounds; and to the other, Three hundred.

VER. 69. Indebted to no Prince or Peer alive,) Indeed, it would be very hard upon Authors, if the ſubſcribing for a Book, which does honour to one's Age and Country, and conſequently reflects back part of it on the Subſcribers, ſhould be eſteemed a debt or obligation.

VER. 164. In downright charity revive the dead;) This is very happily expreſſed, and means, that it is the Poet's office to relieve the poverty of the preſent language with the uſeleſs ſtores of the paſt: not out of charity to the dead, but to the living. „The riches of a language (ſays a very fine writer and „moſt judicious critic) are actually increaſed by retaining its „old words; and beſides they have often a greater real weight „and dignity than thoſe of a more faſhionable caſt, which ſuc„ceed to them. This needs no proof to ſuch as are verſed in „the earlier writings of any language.„ And again, „From „theſe teſtimonies we learn, the extreme value which theſe „great maſters of compoſition ſet upon their old writers; and „as the reaſon of the thing juſtifies their opinions, we may „further ſee the important uſe of ſome late attempts to reſtore „a better knowledge of our own. This ran us into periphraſis and general „expreſſion; the peculiar bane of every poliſhed language.„ Eng. Commentary and Notes on the Ars poetica of Horace, p. 43, 44.

VER. 167. Command old words, that long have ſlept, to wake) The imagery is here very ſublime. It turns the Poet to a Magician evoking the dead from their ſepulchres,

Et mugire ſolum, maneſque exire ſepulchris.

VER. 170. For Uſe will father what's begot by Senſe) A very fine and happy improvement on the expreſſion, if not on the thought, of his original.

VER. 174. Prune the luxuriant, &c.) Our Poet, at about fifteen, got acquainted with Walſh, whoſe candor and judgment he has celebrated in his Eſſay on Criticiſm. Walſh encouraged him greatly, and uſed to tell him, there was one road ſtill open for diſtinction, in which he might excell the reſt of his countrymen, and that was by correctneſs, in which the Engliſh poets had been remarkably deficient. For tho' we have had ſeveral great Genius's, yet not one of them knew how to prune his luxuriancies. This therefore, as he had talents that ſeem capable of things worthy improving, ſhould be his principal ſtudy. Our young Author followed his advice, till habit made correcting the moſt agreeable, as well as uſeful, of all his poetical exerciſes. And the delight he took in it produced the effect he ſpeaks of in the following lines,

Then poliſh all with ſo much life and eaſe,
You think 'tis nature, and a knack to pleaſe.

We are not commonly taught to expect this effect from correction; and it has been obſerved oftener to produce a heavy ſtiffneſs, which by another image the ancients called ſmelling of the lamp. And without doubt this will, moſt an end, be the conſequence, when it is diſcharged with pain, and merely, as a taſk. But when it becomes an exerciſe of pleaſure, the judgment lying no harder on the fancy than to direct its ſallies; will preſerve the life; and the fancy will ſo lighten the judgment as to produce eaſe.

VER. 175. But ſhow no mercy to an empty line;) To ſuch, our Poet was always inexorable. Unleſs it was once, when in the full blaze of his glory, he choſe to ſacrifice to envy, in that devoted and execrable line, in one of the beſt tranſlated books of the Odyſſey, „Cloſe to the Cliff with both his hands he clung,

„And ſtuck adherent, and ſuſpended hung.

The tribe of ſmall wits and critics could never have ſupported themſelves without the conſolation of ſuch a verſe, to which they have ever ſince ſtuck adherent, and ſuſpended hung. Shakeſpear afforded the Dunces of his time the ſame conſolation, if we believe Ben Johnſon, by his — Cæſar did never wrong but with juſt cauſe. But there is a ſort of ſtill lower Creatures, at the tail of which is one EDWARDS, who can make ſhift to ſubſiſt even on a Printer's blunder. The late Editor of Shakeſpear gave order to the corrector of the preſs, that all Mr. Pope's notes ſhould be printed in their places. In one of theſe there was mention made, as they ſay, of ſome Italian novels (I forget whoſe) in which Dec. and Nov. were printed thus contractedly. But the printers of the late edition lengthen'd them into December and November, and, in this condition, they are charged upon the Editor by this Edwards. Now, was the man ſuch a Dunce to make his criticiſm with good faith, he is much to be pitied; was he ſuch a Knave to make it without, he is much more to be pitied.

VER. 176. Then poliſh all, &c.) A celebrated French writer ſays — „L'art d'etre eloquent en vers eſt de tous les arts le plus „difficile, & le plus rare. On trouvera mille Genies qui ſçauront „aranger un ouvrage, & le verſifier d'une maniere commune; „mais le traiter en vrai Poete, c'eſt un talent qui eſt donné à „trois ou quatre hommes ſur la terre.

VER. 177. You think 'tis Nature, and a knack to pleaſe:) The reaſon is becauſe we are wont to give to nature every thing that is plain, eaſy, and ſimple; without reflecting, that that artificial ordonance of words and expreſſion, from whence this eaſe ariſes, is the effect of much ſtudy and application. It is true, that ſtudy is commonly obſerved to deſtroy this very eaſe, which, we ſay, ariſes from it. It may, and will do ſo in a common writer; but never, in a genius. „The preciſely right expreſſion „is but one, while the meaning required may be tolerably con-„veyed in one hundred. But in ſuch a croud, the ſearch requires „labour; and when you have it upon the right, unleſs you have „taſte as well as judgment, you will never know, for certain, that „it is the very thing you ſeek; ſo you go on till you are tired; „and then the firſt that offers is received. Whereas a genius ſeizes „it as ſoon as found, and never ſuffers the change to be put upon „him by its counterfeit."

NOTES.

VER. 178. But eaſe in writing, &c.) That ſpecies of writers, which our Poet elſewhere calls

The mob of Gentlemen who wrote with eaſe, underſtood this quality of a poem to belong only to ſuch as (a certain wit ſays) were eaſily written; whereas he ſuppoſes it to be the laſt and hardly attained perfection of a laboured work. But the Gentleman-writing, laughed at in the line above, and its oppoſite, which he ſomewhere calls proſe run mad, are the two extremes of that perfect ſtyle, the idea of which he has here ſo well deſcribed from his own writings. As eaſe was the mode of the laſt age, which took Suckling for its pattern; ſo the imitation of Milton has introduced a pompous hardneſs into the affected writings of the preſent. Which laſt character Quintilian deſcribes very juſtly, and accounts well for its ſucceſs, — „Evenit „nonnunquam ut aliquid grande inveniat, qui ſemper quaerit quod „nimium eſt; verum & raro evenit, & caetera vitia non penſat.„ I remember once, on reading a poem of this kind with Mr. Pope, where the Poet was always on the ſtrain, and labouring for expreſſion, he ſaid pleaſantly: This is a ſtrange man: he ſeems to think with the Apothecaries, that Album grecum is better than an ordinary ſtool. He himſelf was never ſwelling or pompous: and if ever he inclined to hardneſs, it was not from attempting to ſay a common thing with magnificence, but from including a great deal in a little room.

"" But eaſe in writing flows from Art, not chance;
"" As thoſe move eaſieſt who have learn'd to dance.
If ſuch the plague and pains to write by rule,
Better (ſay I) be pleas'd, and play the fool;
Call, if you will, bad rhyming a diſeaſe,
It gives men happineſs, or leaves them eaſe.
There liv'd in primo Georgii (they record)
A worthy member, no ſmall fool, a Lord;
Who, tho' the Houſe was up, delighted ſate,
Heard, noted, anſwer'd, as in full debate:
In all but this, a man of ſober life,
Fond of his Friend, and civil to his Wife;
Not quite a mad-man, tho' a paſty fell,

NOTES.

VER. 184. There liv'd in primo Georgii, &c.) The imitation of this ſtory of the Madman is as much ſuperior to his original, in the fine and eaſy manner of telling, as that of Lucullus's Soldier comes ſhort of it. It is true the turn Horace's madman took, agrees better with the ſubject of his Epiſtle, which is Poetry; and doubtleſs there were other beauties in it, which time has deprived us of. For it is in poetry as in painting, the moſt delicate touches go firſt; and, what is worſe, they agree in this too, that they are laſt obſerved. So that, what between time and ill taſte, the greateſt beauties are the ſhorteſt lived. But we need not wonder that ancient ſatiriſts ſhould feel the effects of this fatal union, when thoſe noble ones of ſo modern a date as Rablais and Cervantes are ſo little underſtood. One of the fineſt ſtrokes in the latter is in the plan of this famous Romance, which makes a Spaniſh Gentleman of fifty run mad with reading books of Chivalry. But we ſee little of its beauty, becauſe we do not know that a diſordered imagination is a common malady amongſt Spaniſh Gentlemen in the decline of life. A fact which Thuanus occaſionally informs us of, „Men„doza étoit un fort habile homme, il avoit été employé en de „grandes Ambaſſades — ſur la fin de ſes jours il devint furieux, „comme d'ordinaire les Eſpagnols.„ Thuana.

VER. 312. Survey both worlds,) It is obſervable with what ſobriety he has corrected the licentiouſneſs of his Original, which made the expectation of another world a part of that ſuperſtition, he would explode; whereas his Imitator is only for removing the falſe terrors from the world of ſpirits, ſuch as diablerie of witchcraft and purgatory.

DR. JOHN DONNE,

Dean of ST. PAUL's,

VERSIFIED.

Quid vetat & noſmet Lucilî ſcripta legentes
Quaerere, num illius, num rerum dura negârit
Verſiculos natura magis factos, & euntes
Mollius ? HOR.

DEUX DOMINOS

THE

of Dr. DONNE.

THE manly wit of Donne, which was the Character of his genius, ſuited beſt with Satire; and in this he excelled, tho' he wrote but little; ſix ſhort poems being all we find amongſt his writings of this ſort. Mr. Pope has embelliſhed two of them with his wit and harmony. He called it verſifying them becauſe indeed the lines have nothing more of numbers than their being compoſed of a certain quantity of ſyllables. This is the more to be admired, becauſe, as appears by his other poems, and eſpecially from that fine one called the Progreſs of the Soul, his verſe did not want harmony. But, I ſuppoſe, he took the ſermoni propiora of Horace too ſeriouſly: or rather, was content with the character his maſter gives of Lucilius,

Emunctæ naris durus componere verſus.

Having ſpoken of his Progreſs of the Soul, let me add, that Poetry never loſt more than by his not purſuing and finiſhing that noble Deſign; of which he has only given us the Introduction. With regard to his Satires, it is almoſt as much to be lamented that Mr. Pope did not give us a Paraphraſe, in his manner of the Third, which treats the nobleſt ſubject not only of This, but perhaps of any ſatiric Poet. To ſupply this loſs, tho' in a very ſmall degree, I have here inſerted it, in the verſification of Dr. Parnell. It will at leaſt ſerve to ſhew the force of Dr. Donne's genius, and of Mr. Pope's; by removing all that was ruſtic and ſhocking in the one, and not being able to reach a ſingle grace of the other.

Compaſſion checks my ſpleen, yet Scorn denies
The tears a paſſage thro' my ſwelling eyes;
To laugh or weep at ſins, might idly ſhow
Unheedful paſſion, of unfruitful woe.
Satire! ariſe, and try thy ſharper ways,
If ever Satire cur'd an old diſeaſe.

Is not Religion (Heav'n-deſcended dame)
As worthy all our ſoul's devouteſt flame,
As Moral Virtue, in her early ſway,
When the beſt Heathens ſaw by doubtful day?
Are not the joys, the promis'd joys above,
As great and ſtrong to vanquiſh earthly love,
As earthly glory, fame, reſpect, and ſhow;
As all rewards their virtue found below?
Alas? Religion proper means prepares,
Theſe means are ours, and muſt its End be theirs?
And ſhall thy Father's ſpirit meet the ſight
Of Heathen Sages cloath'd in heav'nly light,
Whoſe Merit of ſtrict life, ſeverely ſuited
To Reaſon's dictates, may be faith imputed?
Whilſt thou, to whom he taught the nearer road,
Art ever baniſh'd from the bleſt abode.

Oh! if thy temper ſuch a fear can find,
This fear were valour of the nobleſt kind.

Dar'ſt thou provoke, when rebel ſouls aſpire,
Thy Maker's Vengeance, and thy Monarch's Ire?
Or live entomb'd in ſhips, thy leader's prey,
Spoil of the war, the famine, or the ſea?
In ſearch of pearl, in depth of ocean breathe,
Or live, exil'd the ſun, in mines beneath?

Or, where in tempeſts icy mountains roll,
Attempt a paſſage by the Northern pole?
Or dar'ſt thou parch within the fires of Spain,
Or burn beneath the line, for Indian gain?
Or for ſome Idol of thy Fancy draw,
Some looſe-gown'd dame; O courage made of ſtraw!
Thus, deſp'rate Coward! would'ſt thou bold appear,
Yet when thy God has plac'd thee Centry here,
To thy own foes, to his, ignobly yield,
And leave, for wars forbid, th' appointed field?
Know thy own foes; th' Apoſtate Angel, he
You ſtrive to pleaſe, the foremoſt of the Three;
He makes the pleaſures of his realm the bait,
But can he give for Love, that acts in Hate?
The World's thy ſecond Love, thy ſecond Foe,
The World, whoſe beauties periſh as they blow,
They fly, ſhe fades herſelf, and at the beſt
You graſp a wither'd ſtrumpet to your breaſt.
The Fleſh is next, which in fruition waſtes,
High fluſh'd with all the ſenſual joys it taſtes
While men the fair, the goodly Soul deſtroy,
From whence the fleſh has pow'r to taſte a joy.
Seekſt thou Religion, primitively ſound —
Well, gentle friend, but where may ſhe be found?
By Faith Implicite blind Ignaro led,
Thinks the bright Seraph from his Country fled,
And ſeeks her ſeat at Rome, becauſe we know
She there was ſeen a thouſand years ago;
And loves her Relick rags, as men obey
The foot-cloth where the Prince ſat yeſterday.
Theſe pageant Forms are whining Obed's ſcorn,
Who ſeeks Religion at Geneva born,

A ſullen thing, whoſe coarſeneſs ſuits the crowd,
Tho' young, unhandſome; tho' unhandſome, proud:
Thus, with the wanton, ſome perverſely judge
All girls unhealthy but the Country drudge.
Nor foreign ſchemes make eaſy Cæpio roam,
The man contented takes his Church at home;
Nay ſhould ſome Preachers, ſervile bawds of gain,
Should ſome new Laws, which like new-faſhions reign,
Command his faith to count Salvation ty'd
To viſit his, and viſit none beſide,
He grants Salvation centers in his own,
And grants it centers but in his alone:
From youth to age he graſps the proffer'd dame,
And they confer his Faith, who give his Name:
So from the Guardian's hands, the Wards who live
Enthrall'd to Guardians, take the wives they give.
From all profeſſions careleſs Airy flies.
For, all profeſſions can't be good, he cries,
And here a fault, and there another views,
And lives unfix'd for want of heart to chuſe:
So men, who know what ſome looſe girls have done,
For fear of marrying ſuch, will marry none.
The Charms of all obſequious Courtly ſtrike;
On each he doats, on each attends alike;
And thinks, as diff'rent countries deck the dame,
The dreſſes altering, and the ſex the ſame;
So fares Religion, chang'd in outward ſhew,
But 'tis Religion ſtill, where'er we go:
This blindneſs ſprings from an exceſs of light,
And men embrace the wrong to chuſe the right.
But thou of force muſt one Religion own,
And only one, and that the Right alone.

To find that Right one, aſk thy Rev'rend Sire;
Let him of his, and him of his enquire;
Tho' Truth and Falſhood ſeem as twins ally'd,
There's Elderſhip on Truth's delightful ſide,
Her ſeek with heed — who ſeeks the ſoundeſt Firſt
Is not of No Religion, nor the worſt.
T'adore, or ſcorn an Image, or proteſt,
May all be bad: doubt wiſely for the beſt;
'Twere wrong to ſleep, or headlong run aſtray;
It is not wand'ring, to inquire the way.
"On a large mountain, at the Baſis wide,
"Steep to the top, and craggy at the ſide,
"Sits ſacred Truth enthron'd; and he who means
"To reach the ſummit, mounts with weary pains,
"Winds round and round, and ev'ry turn eſſays
"Where ſudden breaks reſiſt the ſhorter ways.
"Yet labour ſo, that, ere faint age arrive,
"Thy ſearching ſoul poſſeſs her Reſt alive;
"To work by twilight were to work too late,
"And Age is twilight to the night of fate.
"To will alone, is but to mean delay;
"To work at preſent is the uſe of day,
"For man's employ much thought and deed remain,
"High Thoughts the Soul, hard deeds the body ſtrain:
"And Myſt'ries aſk believing, which to View
"Like the fair Sun, are plain, but dazzling too.
Be Truth, ſo found, with ſacred heed poſſeſt,
Not Kings have pow'r to tear it from thy breaſt,
By no blank Chartres harm they where they hate,
Nor are they Vicars, but the Hands of Fate.
Ah! fool and wretch, who let'ſt thy ſoul be ty'd
To human Laws! Or muſt it ſo be try'd?

Or will it boot thee, at the lateſt day,
When Judgment ſits, and Juſtice aſks thy plea,
That Philip that, or Greg'ry taught thee this,
Or John or Martin? All may teach amiſs:
For, ev'ry contrary in each extream
This holds alike, and each may plead the ſame.

Would'ſt thou to Pow'r a proper duty ſhew?
'Tis thy firſt taſk the bounds of pow'r to know;
The bounds once paſt, it holds the name no more,
Its nature alters, which it own'd before,
Nor were ſubmiſſion Humbleneſs expreſt,
But all a low Idolatry at beſt.

Pow'r, from above ſubordinately ſpread,
Streams like a fountain from th' eternal head;
There, calm and pure the living waters flow,
But roar a Torrent or a Flood below;
Each flow'r, ordain'd the Margins to adorn,
Each native Beauty from its roots is torn,
And left on Deſerts, Rocks, and Sands, or toſt
All the long travel, and in Ocean loſt:
So fares the ſoul, which more that Pow'r reveres
Man claims from God, than what in God inheres.

This noble Similitude, with which the Satire concludes, Dr. Parnell did not ſeem to underſtand, and ſo was not able to expreſs, in its original force. Dr. Donne ſays,

„As ſtreams are, Pow'r is; thoſe bleſt flow'rs that dwell
„At the rough Streams calm head, thrive, and do well;
„But having left their roots, and themſelves given
„To the Streams tyrannous rage, alas, are driven
„Through mills, rocks, and woods, and at laſt, almoſt
„Conſum'd in going, in the Sea are loſt.
„So periſh Souls, &c.

Dr. Donne compares Power or Authority to Streams; and Souls to Flowers; but not being ſo explicite in the latter, Dr. Parnell overlooked that part, and ſo has hurt the whole thought, by making the Flowers paſſive; whereas the Original ſays they leave their roots; and give themſelves to the ſtream: that is, wilfully prefer human Authority to divine; and this makes them the object of his Satire; which they would not have been, were they irreſiſtibly carried away, as the Imitation ſuppoſes.

SATIRE II.

SIR; though (I thank God for it) I do hate
Perfectly all this town; yet there's one ſtate
In all ill things, ſo excellently beſt,
That hate towards them, breeds pity towards the reſt,
Though Poetry, indeed, be ſuch a ſin,
As I think, that brings dearth and Spaniards in:
Though like the peſtilence, and old-faſhion'd love,
Ridingly it catch men, and doth remove
Never, till it be ſtarv'd out; yet their ſtate
Is poor, diſarm'd, like Papiſts, not worth hate.
One (like a wretch, which at barre jud'gd as dead,
Yet prompts him which ſtands next, and cannot read,
And ſaves his life) gives Idiot Actors means,
(Starving himſelf) to live by's labour'd ſcenes.
As in ſome Organs, Puppits dance above
And bellows pant below, which them do move.

SATIRA II.

YES; thank my ſtars! as early as I knew
This Town, I had the ſenſe to hate it too:
Yet here, as ev'n in Hell, there muſt be ſtill
One Giant-Vice, ſo excellently ill,
That all beſide, one pities, not abhors;
As who knows Sappho, ſmiles at other whores.

I grant that Poetry's a crying ſin;
It brought (no doubt) th' Exciſe and Army in:
Catch'd like the Plague, or Love, the Lord knows how,
But that the cure is ſtarving, all allow.
Yet like the Papiſt's, is the Poet's ſtate,
Poor and diſarm'd, and hardly worth your hate!

Here a lean Bard, whoſe wit could never give Himſelf a dinner, makes an Actor live;
The Thief condemn'd, in law already dead,
So prompts, and ſaves a rogue who cannot read.
Thus as the pipes of ſome carv'd Organ move,
The gilded puppers dance and mount above.
Heav'd by the breath th' inſpiring bellows blow:
Th' inſpiring bellows lie and pant below.

One would move love by rythmes; but witchcraft's charms
Bring not now their old fears, nor their old harms;
Rams, and ſlings now are ſilly battery,
Piſtolets are the beſt artillery.
And they who write to Lords, rewards to get,
Are they not like ſingers at doors for meat?
And they who write, becauſe all write, have ſtill
That 'ſcuſe for writing, and for writing ill.

But he is worſt, who beggarly doth chaw
Others wits fruits, and in his ravenous maw
Rankly digeſted, doth thoſe things out-ſpue,
As his own things; and they're his own, 'tis true,
For if one eat my meat, though it be known
The meat was mine, the excrement's his own.

But theſe do me no harm, nor they which uſe,
. . . . . to out-uſure Jews,
T' outdrink the ſea, t'out-ſwear the Letanie,
Who with ſins all kinds as familiar be
As Confeſſors, and for whoſe ſinful ſake
Schoolmen new tenements in hell muſt make;

And ſcorn the fleſh, the dev'l, and all but gold.
These write to Lords, ſome mean reward to get,
As needy beggars ſing at doors for meat.
Thoſe write becauſe all write, and ſo have ſtill

Wretched indeed! but far more wretched yet
Is he who makes his meal on others wit:
'Tis chang'd, no doubt, from what it was before,
His rank digeſtion makes it wit no more:
Senſe, paſt thro' him, no longer is the ſame;
For food digeſted takes another name.
I paſs o'er all thoſe Confeſſors and Martyrs,
Who live like S — tt — n, or who die like Chartres,

But theſe puniſh themſelves. The inſolence
Of Coſcus, only, breeds my juſt offence,
Whom time (which rots all, and makes botches pox,
And plodding on, muſt make a calf an ox)
Hath made a Lawyer; which (alas) of late;
But ſcarce a Poet: jollier of this ſtate,
Than are new-benefic'd Miniſters, he throws
Like nets or lime-twigs whereſoe'er he goes
His title of Barriſter on ev'ry wench,
And wooes in language of the Pleas and Bench. * *
Words, words which would tear
The tender labyrinth of a Maid's ſoft ear:
More, more than ten Sclavonians ſcolding, more
Than when winds in our ruin'd Abbyes roar.

NOTES.

VER. 44. In what Commandment's large contents they dwell.)
The Original is more humourous,
In which Commandment's large receit they dwell.

Whom crimes gave wealth, and wealth gave Impudence:
Time, that at laſt matures a clap to pox,
Whoſe gentle progreſs makes a calf an ox,
And brings all natural events to paſs,
Hath made him an Attorney of an Aſs.
No young divine, new-benefic'd, can be More pert, more proud, more poſitive than he.
What further could I wiſh the fop to do,
But turn a wit, and ſcribble verſes too;
Pierce the ſoft lab'rinth of a Lady's ear
With rhymes of this per cent. and that per year?
Or court a Wife, ſpread out his wily parts,
Like nets or lime-twigs, for rich Widows hearts;
Call himſelf Barriſter to ev'ry wench,
And wooe in language of the Pleas and Bench?
Language, which Boreas might to Auſter hold
More rough than forty Germans when they ſcold.

VER. 61. Language, which Boreas —) The Original has here a very fine ſtroke of ſatire,

Than when winds in our ruin'd Abbyes roar.

The frauds with which that work (ſo neceſſary for the welfare both of religion and the ſtate) was begun; the rapine with which it was carried on; and the diſſoluteneſs in which the plunder ariſing from it was waſted, had ſcandalized all ſober men; and diſpoſed the beſt Proteſtants to wiſh, that ſome part of that immenſe wealth, ariſing from the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries, had been reſerved for Charity, Hoſpitality, and even for the public ſervice of Religion.

Curs'd be the wretch, ſo venal and ſo vain,
Paltry and proud, as drabs in Drury-lane.
'Tis ſuch a bounty as was never known,
If PETER deigns to help you to your own:
What thanks, what praiſe, if Peter but ſupplies,
And what a ſolemn face if he denies!
Grave, as when pris'ners ſhake the head and ſwear
'Twas only Sureryſhip that brought 'em there.
His Office keeps your Parchment fates entire,
He ſtarves with cold to ſave them from the fire;
For you he walks the ſtreets thro' rain or duſt.
For not in Chariots Peter puts his truſt;
For you he ſweats and labours at the laws,
Takes God to witneſs he affects your cauſe,
And lies to ev'ry Lord in ev'ry thing,
Like a King's Favourite — or like a King.

NOTES.

* He ſpeaks here of thoſe illiberal Advocates who frequent the Bar for mere gain, without any purpoſe of promoting or advancing civil juſtice; the conſequence of which, he tells us, is a ſlaviſh attendance, together with the degradation of their parts and abilities. So that when they undertake to excuſe the bad conduct of their client, they talk as idly, and are heard with the ſame contempt, as debtors, whoſe common cant is, that they were undone by Suretyſhip. The Imitator did not ſeem to take the fineneſs of the ſatire, or he would not have neglected an abuſe of this importance, to fall upon ſuch paultry

Like a wedge in a block [2], wring to the barre,
Bearing like asses, and more shameless farre
Than carted whores, lye to the grave Judge; for Bastardy abounds not in King's titles, nor Simony and Sodomy in Church-men's lives,
As these things do in him; by these he thrives.
Shortly (as th' sea) he'll compass all the land,
From Scots to Wight, from Mount to Dover strand.
And spying heirs melting with Luxury,
Satan will not joy at their sins as he:
For (as a thrifty wench scrapes kitchen-stuffe,
And barrelling the droppings, and the snuffe
Of wasting candles, which in thirty year,
Reliquely kept, perchance buys wedding chear)
Piecemeal he gets lands, and spends as much time
Wringing each acre, as maids pulling prime.
In parchment then, large as the fields, he draws
Assurances, big as glos's'd civil laws,
So huge that men (in our times forwardness)
Are Fathers of the Church for writing less.

NOTES.

things as Peter, and those whom Peter considered (and so used) as his patrimony.

These are the talents that adorn them all,
From wicked Waters ev'n to godly * *
Not more of Simony beneath black gowns,
Nor more of baſtardy in heirs to Crowns,
In ſhillings and in pence at firſt they deal;
And ſteal ſo little, few perceive they ſteal;
Till, like the Sea, they compaſs all the land,
From Scots to Wight, from Mount to Dover ſtrand:
And when rank Widows purchaſe luſcious nights,
Or when a Duke to Janſen punts at White's,
Or City-heir in mortgage melts away;
Satan himſelf feels far leſs joy than they.
Piecemeal they win this acre firſt, then that,
Glean on, and gather up the whole eſtate.
Then ſtrongly fencing ill-got wealth by law,
Indentures, Cov'nants, Articles they draw,
Large as the fields themſelves, and larger far
Than Civil Codes, with all their Gloſſes, are;
So vaſt, our new Divines, we muſt confeſs,
Are Fathers of the Church for writing leſs.

Theſe he writes not; nor for theſe written payes,
Therefore ſpares no length (as in thoſe firſt dayes
When Luther was profeſt, he did deſire
Short Pater-noſters, ſaying as a Fryer
Each day his Beads; but having left thoſe laws, Adds to Chriſt's prayer, the power and glory clauſe)
But when he ſells or changes land, h'impaires
The writings, and (unwatch'd) leaves out, ſes heires,
As ſlily as any Commentator goes by Hard words, or ſenſe; or, in Divinity
As controverters in vouch'd Texts, leave out
Schrewd words, which might againſt them clear the doubt.
Where are theſe ſpread woods which cloath'd heretofore
Thoſe bought lands? not built, not burnt within door.

NOTES.

VER. 104. So Luther &c.) Our Poet, by judiciouſly tranſpoſing this fine ſimilitude, has given new luſtre to his Author's thought. The Lawyer (ſays Dr. Donne) enlarges the legal inſtruments for conveying property to the bigneſs of gloſs'd civil Laws, when it is to ſecure his own ill-got wealth. But let the ſame Lawyer convey property for you, and he then omits even the neceſſary words; and becomes as conciſe and haſty as the looſe poſtils of a modern Divine. So Luther while a Monk, and, by his Inſtitution, obliged to ſay Maſs, and pray in perſon for others, thought even his Pater-noſter too long. But when he ſet up for a Governor in the Church, and his buſineſs was to direct others how to pray for the ſucceſs of his new Model; he then lengthened the Pater-noſter by a new clauſe. This re-

But let them write for you, each rogue impairs
The deeds and dextrouſly omits, ſes heires:
No Commentator can more ſlily paſs
O'er a learn'd, unintelligible place;
Or, in quotation, ſhrewd Divines leave out
Thoſe words, that would againſt them clear the doubt.

So Luther thought the Pater-noſter long,
When doom'd to ſay his beads and Even-ſong;
But having caſt his cowle, and left thoſe laws,
Adds to Chriſt's pray'r, the Pow'r and Glory clauſe.

The lands are bought; but where are to be found
Thoſe ancient woods, that ſhaded all the ground?
We ſee no new-built palaces aſpire,
No kitchens emulate the veſtal fire.

NOTES.

preſentation of the firſt part of his conduct was to ridicule his want of devotion; as the other, where he tells us, that the addition was the power and glory clauſe, was to ſatirize his ambition; and both together to inſinuate that, from a Monk, he was become totally ſecularized. — About this time of his life Dr. Donne had a ſtrong propenſity to Popery, which appears from ſeveral ſtrokes in theſe ſatires. We find amongſt his works, a ſhort ſatirical thing called a Catalogue of rare books, one article of which is intitled, M. Lutherus de abbreviatione Orationis Dominicæ, alluding to Luther's omiſſion of the concluding Doxology, in his two Catechiſmes, which ſhews he was fond of the ioke; and, in the firſt inſtance (for the ſake of his moral) at the expence of truth. As his putting Eraſmus and Reuchlin in the rank of Lully and Agrippa ſhews what were then his ſentiments of Reformation.

Where the old landlords troops, and almes? In halls
Carthuſian faſts, and fulſome Bacchanals
Equally I hate. Mean's bleſt. In rich men's homes
I bid kill ſome beaſts, but no hecatombs,
None ſtarve, none ſurfeit ſo. But (oh) we allow
Good works as good, but out of faſhion now,
Like old rich wardrobes. But my words none draws
Within the vaſt reach of th' huge ſtatutes jawes.

NOTES.

I will only obſerve, that this Catalogue was written in imitation of Rabelais's famous Catalogue of the Library of St. Victor. It is one of the fineſt ſtrokes in that extravagant ſatire (which was then the Manual of the Wits) and ſo became the ſubject of much imitation; the beſt of which are this of Dr. Donne's and one of Sir Thomas Brown's.

VER. 120. Theſe as good works, &c.) Dr. Donne ſays,

But (oh) we allow
Good works as good, but out of faſhion now.

The popiſh Doctrine of good works was one of thoſe abuſes of Religion which the Church of England condemns in its Articles. To this the Poet's words ſatirically allude. And having throughout this ſatire had ſeveral flings at the Reformation, which it

Where are thoſe troops of Poor, that throng'd of yore

Well, I could wiſh, that ſtill in lordly domes

That both extremes were baniſh'd from their walls,
Carrhuſian faſts, and fulſome Bacchanals:
And all mankind might that juſt Mean obſerve,
In which none e'er could ſurfeit, none could ſtarve.
Theſe as good works, 'tis true, we all allow;
But oh! theſe works are not in faſhion now:
Like rich old wardrobes, things extremely rare,
Extremely fine, but what no man will wear.

A Purgatory, ſuch as fear'd hell is
A recreation, and ſcant map of this.

I had no ſuit there, nor new ſuit to ſhow,
Yet went to Court; but as Glare which did go

His family ſuggeſts that a general decay of nature, which had been long coming on, ended with a Dropſy in the breaſt. The Gentlemen of the Dunciad maintain, that he fell by the keen pen of our redoutable Laureat. We ourſelves ſhould be inclined to this latter opinion, for the ſake of ornamenting his ſtory; and that we might be able to ſay, that he died, like his immortal nameſake, Alexander the Great, by a drug of ſo deadly cold a nature, that, as Plutarch and other grave writers tell us, it could

SATIRE IV.

WELL, if it be my time to quit the ſtage,
Adieu to all the follies of the age!
I die in charity with fool and knave,
Secure of peace at leaſt beyond the grave.
I've had my Purgatory here betimes,
And paid for all my ſatires, all my rhymes.
The Poet's hell, its tortures, fiends and flames,
To this were trifles, toys and empty names.

With fooliſh pride my heart was never fir'd,
Nor the vain itch t'admire, or be admir'd;
I hop'd for no commiſſion from his Grace;
I bought no benefice, I begg'd no place;
Had no new verſes, nor new ſuit to ſhow;
Yet went to Court! — the Dev'l would have it ſo.

VER. 7. The Poet's hell,) He has here with great prudence corrected the licentious expreſſion of his Original.

VER. 10. Nor the vain itch t' admire, or be admir'd;) Courtiers have the ſame pride in admiring, that Poets have in being admired. For Vanity is as often gratified in paying our court to our ſuperiors, as in receiving it from our inferiors.

VER. 13. Had no new verſes, nor new ſuit to ſhow;) Inſinuating that Poetry and new clothes only come to Court, in honour of the Sovereign, and only ſerve to ſupply a day's converſation.

To Maſs in jeſt, catch'd, was fain to diſburſe
Two hundred markes, which is the Statutes curſe,
Before he ſcap'd; ſo it pleas'd my deſtiny
(Guilty of my ſin of going) to think me
As prone to all ill, and of good as forget-full, as proud, luſtfull, and as much in debt,
As vain, as witleſs, and as falſe, as they
Which dwell in Court, for once going that way.

Therefore I ſuffer'd this; towards me did run
A thing more ſtrange, than on Nile's ſlime the Sun
E'er bred, or all which into Noah's Ark came:
A thing which would have pos'd Adam to name:
Stranger than ſeven Antiquaries ſtudies,
Than Africk Monſters, Guianaes rarities,
Stranger than ſtrangers[1]: one who, for a Dane,
In the Danes Maſſacre had ſure been ſlain,
If he had liv'd then; and without help dies,
When next the Prentices 'gainſt ſtrangers riſe;
One whom the watch at noon lets ſcarce go by;
One to whom the examining Juſtice ſure would cry,
Sir, by your Prieſthood tell me what you are?

His cloaths were ſtrange, tho' coarſe, and black, though bare,

NOTES.

[1] This is ill expreſſed, for it only means, he would be more ſtared at than Strangers are.

But, as the Fool that in reforming days
Would go to Maſs in jeſt (as ſtory ſays)
Could not but think, to pay his fine was odd,
Since 'twas no form'd deſign of ſerving God;
So was I puniſh'd, as if full as proud
As prone to ill, as negligent of good,
As deep in debt, without a thought to pay,
As vain, as idle, and as falſe, as they
Who live at Court, for going once that way!
Scarce was I enter'd, when, behold! there came
A thing which Adam had been pos'd to name;
Noah had refus'd it lodging in his Ark,
Where all the Race of Reptiles might embark:
A verier monſter, than on Africk's ſhore
The ſun e'er got, or ſliiny Nilus bore,
Or Sloane or Woodward's wondrous ſhelves contain,
Nay, all that lying Travellers can feign.
The watch would hardly let him paſs at noon,
At night, would ſwear him dropt out of the Moon.
One whom the mob, when next we find or make
A popiſh plot, ſhall for a Jeſuit take,
And the wiſe Juſtice ſtarting from his chair
Cry, By your Prieſthood tell me what you are?
Such was the wight: Th' apparel on his back,
Tho' coarſe, was rev'rend, and tho' bare, was black;

Sleeveleſs his jerkin was, and it had been
Velvet, but 'twas now (ſo much ground was ſeen)
Become Tuffraffary; and our children ſhall
See it plain raſh a while, then nought at all.
The thing hath travel'd, and, faith, ſpeaks all tongues,
And only knoweth what to all States belongs,
Made of th' accents, and beſt phraſe of all theſe,
He ſpeaks one language. If ſtrange meats diſpleaſe,
Art can deceive, or hunger force my taſt;
But pedants motly tongue, ſoldiers bumbaſt,
Mountebanks drug-tongue, nor the terms of law,
Are ſtrong enough preparatives to draw
Me to hear this, yet I muſt be content
With his tongue, in his tongue call'd Complement:
In which he can win widows, and pay ſcores,
Make men ſpeak treaſon, cozen ſubtleſt whores,
Out-flatter favourites, or out-lie either
Jovius, or Surius, or both together.

He names me, and comes to me; I whiſper, God,
How have I ſinn'd, that thy wrath's furious Rod,

The ſuit, if by the faſhion one might gueſs,
Was velvet in the youth of good Queen Beſs,
But mere tuff-taffety what now remain'd;
So Time, that changes all things, had ordain'd!
Our ſons ſhall ſee it leiſurely decay,
Firſt turn plain raſh, then vaniſh quite away.

This thing has travel'd, ſpeaks each language too,
And knows what's fit for ev'ry ſtate to do;
Of whoſe beſt phraſe and courtly accent join'd,
He forms one tongue, exotic and refin'd.
Talkers I've learn'd to bear; Mōtteux I knew,
Henley himſelf I've heard, and Budgel too.
The Doctor's Wormwood ſtyle, the Haſh of tongues
A Pedant makes, the Storm of Gonſon's lungs,
The whole Artill'ry of the terms of War,
And (all thoſe plagues in one) the bawling Bar:
Theſe I could bear; but not a rogue ſo civil,
Whoſe tongue will compliment you to the devil.
A tongue, that can cheat widows, cancel ſcores,
Make Scots ſpeak treaſon, cozen ſubtleſt whores,
With royal Favourites in flatt'ry vie,
And Oldmixon and Burnet both out-lie.

He ſpies me out; I whiſper, Gracious God!
What ſin of mine could merit ſuch a rod?
That all the ſhot of dulneſs now muſt be
From this thy blunderbuſs diſcharg'd on me!

This fellow, chuſeth me! He ſaith, Sir,
I love your judgment, whom do you prefer
For the beſt Linguiſt? and I ſlily
Said, that I thought Calepines Dictionary.
Nay, but of men, moſt ſweet Sir? Beza then,
Some Jeſuits, and two reverend men
Of our two academies I nam'd: here
He ſtopt me, and ſaid, Nay your Apoſtles were Good pretty Linguiſts; ſo Panurgus was,
Yet a poor Gentleman; all theſe may paſs
By travail. Then, as if he would have ſold
His tongue, he prais'd it, and ſuch wonders told,
That I was fain to ſay, If you had liv'd, Sir,
Time enough to have been Interpreter
To Babels Bricklayers, ſure the Tower had ſtood.
He adds, If of Court life you knew the good,

VER. 73. a period of a mile.) A ſtadium of Euripides was a ſtanding joke amongſt the Greeks. By the ſame kind of pleaſantry, Cervantes has called his Hero's countenance, a face of half a league long; which, becauſe the humour, as well as the meaſure of the expreſſion was exceſſive, all his tranſlators have judiciouſly agreed to omit without doubt paying due attention to that ſober rule of Quintilian, Licet omnis hyperbole ſit ultra fidem, non tamen debet eſſe ultra MODUM. SCRIBL.

Permit (he cries) no ſtranger to your fame
To crave your ſentiment if——'s your name.
What Speech eſteem you moſt? "The King's, ſaid I."
But the beſt words? — "O Sir, the Dictionary."
You miſs my aim; I mean the moſt acute
And perfect Speaker? — "Onſlow, paſt diſpute."
But, Sir, of writers? "Swift, for cloſer ſtyle,
"But Hoy for a period of a mile."
Why yes, 'tis granted, theſe indeed may paſs:
Good common linguiſts, and ſo Panurge was;
Nay troth th' Apoſtles (tho' perhaps too rough)
Had once a pretty gift of Tongues enough:
Yet theſe were all poor Gentlemen! I dare
Affirm, 'twas Travel made them what they were.
Thus others talents having nicely ſhown,
He came by ſure tranſition to his own:
Till I cry'd out, You prove yourſelf ſo able,
Piry! you was not Druggerman at Babel;
For had they found a linguiſt half ſo good,
I make no queſtion but the Tow'r had ſtood.

NOTES.

VER. 78. Yet theſe were all poor Gentlemen!) Our Poet has here added to the humour of his original. Donne makes his thread-bare Traveller content himſelf under his poverty with the reflection that Panurge himſelf, the great Traveller and Linguiſt in Rabelais, went a begging.

You would leave loneneſs. I ſaid, Not alone

My loneneſs is; But Spartanes faſhion

To teach by painting drunkards doth not laſt

Now, Aretines pictures have made few chaſte;

No more can Princes Courts (though there be few Better pictures of vice) teach me virtue.

He like to a high-ſtretcht Lute-ſtring ſqueaks,

O Sir,

'Tis ſweet to talk of Kings. At Weſtminſter,

Said I, the man that keeps the Abby tombs,

And for his price, doth with whoever comes

Of all our Harrys, and our Edwards talk,

From King to King, and all their kin can walk:

Your ears ſhall hear nought but Kings; your eyes

meet

Kings only: The way to it is Kings-ſtreet.

"Obliging Sir! for Courts you ſure were made:
"Why then for ever bury'd in the ſhade?
"Spirits like you, ſhould ſee and ſhould be ſeen,
"The King would ſmile on you — at leaſt the Queen.
Ah gentle Sir! you Courtiers ſo cajol us —
But Tully has it, Nunquam minus ſolus:
And as for Courts, forgive me, If I ſay
No leſſons now are taught the Spartan way,
Tho' in his pictures Luſt be full diſplay'd,
Few are the Converts Aretine has made:
And tho' the Court ſhow Vice exceeding clear,
None ſhould, by my advice, learn Virtue there.
At this entranc'd he lifts his hands and eyes,
Squeaks like a high ſtretch'd luteſtring, and replies,
"Oh 'tis the ſweeteſt of all earthly things
"To gaze on Princes, and to talk of Kings!
Then, happy Man who ſhows the Tombs! ſaid I,
He dwells amidſt the royal Family;
He ev'ry day from King to King can walk,
Of all our Harries, all our Edwards talk,
And get by ſpeaking truth of monarchs dead,
What few can of the living, Eaſe and Bread.

He ſmack'd, and cry'd, He's baſe, mechanique, coarſe,
So are all your Engliſhmen in their diſcourſe.

Are not your Frenchmen neat? Mine, as you ſee,
I have but one, Sir, look, he follows me.
Certes they are neatly cloath'd. I of this mind am,
Your only wearing is your Grogaram.
Not ſo, Sir, I have more. Under this pitch
He would not fly; I chaf'd him: but as Itch
Scratch'd into ſmart, and as blunt Iron ground
Into an edge, hurts worſe: So, I (fool) found,
Croſſing hurt me. To fit my ſullenneſs,
He to another key his ſtyle doth dreſs;
And aſks what news; I tell him of new playes,
He takes my hand, and as a Still which ſtayes
A Sembrief, 'twixt each drop, he niggardly,
As loth to inrich me, ſo tells many a ly.
More than ten Hollenſheads, or Halls, or Stows,
Of trivial houſhold traſh: He knows, he knows

"Lord, Sir, a meer Mechanic; ſtrangely low,
"And coarſe of phraſe, — your Engliſh all are ſo.
"How elegant your Frenchmen?" Mine, d'ye mean?
I have but one; I hope the fellow's clean,
"Oh! Sir, politely ſo! nay, let me die,
"Your only wearing is your Padua-ſoy."
Not, Sir, my only, I have better ſtill,
And this you ſee is but my diſhabille —
Wild to get looſe, his Patience I provoke,
Miſtake, confound, object at all he ſpoke
But as coarſe iron, ſharpen'd, mangles more,
And itch moſt hurts when anger'd to a ſore;
So when you plague a fool, 'tis ſtill the curſe,
You only make the matter worſe and worſe.
He paſt it o'er; affects an eaſy ſmile
At all my peeviſhneſs, and turns his ſtyle.
He aſk's, "What News? I tell him of new Plays,
New Eunuchs, Harlequins, and Operas.
He hears, and as a Still with ſimples in it
Between each drop it gives, ſtays half a minute,
Loth to enrich me with too quick replies,
By little, and by little, drops his lies.
Meer houſhold trafh! of birth-nights, balls and ſhows,
More than ten Hollinſheads, or Halls, or Stows.

VER. 144. Why Turnpikes) In this recapitulation of modern abuſes, he has imitated his original with great ſpirit. Amongſt thoſe which Dr. Donne mentions is

A Licence, old iron, boots, ſhoes, and egge-Shells to tranſport.

by this he means Monopolies, the moſt unpopular abuſe of power of his time. It continued down thro' the reigns of Elizabeth, James, and Charles I. to the breaking out of the civil war. In the year 1633 the four bodies of the Law entertained the Court with a magnificent Maſk. And one of their Anti-maſks was an ingenious ridicule on the abuſe of Monopolies; which Mr. Withlock thus deſcribes: „In this Anti-maſque of Projectors „(ſays he) came a Fellow with a bunch of Carrots on his

Several other pro- „iectors were in like manner perſonated in this Anti-maſque; „and it pleaſed the ſpectators the more, becauſe by it an in- „formation was covertly given to the king of the unfitneſs and „ridiculouſneſs of theſe projects againſt the Law; and the At- „torney Noy, who had moſt knowledge of them, had a great „hand in this Anti-maſque of the Projectors.„ This exorbitancy was become ſo common and faſhionable, that Ben Johnſon makes a cheating Procurer of Monopolies the chief character in one of his plays; juſt as he had done a cheating Alchymiſt in another.

ſhortly boys ſhall not play
At ſpan-counter, or blow-point, but ſhall pay
Toll to ſome Courtier; and wiſer than all us,
He knows what Lady is not painted. Thus
He with home meats cloyes me. I belch, ſpue, ſpit,
Look pale and ſickly, like a Patient, yet
He thruſts on more, and as he had undertook,
To ſay Gallo-Belgicus without book,
Speaks of all States and deeds that have been ſince
The Spaniards came to th' loſs of Amyens.
Like a big wife, at ſight of loathed meat,
Ready to travail: ſo I ſigh, and ſweat
To hear this [1] Makaron talk: in vain, for yet,
Either my humour, or his own to fit,
He like a priveledg'd ſpie, whom nothing can Diſcredit, libels now 'gainſt each great man.
He names the price of ev'ry office paid;
He ſaith our wars thrive will becauſe delaid;

NOTES.

[1] Whom we call an Aſs, the Italians ſtyle Maccheroni.

VER. 151. What Lady's face &c.) The Original is here very humourous. This torrent of ſcandal concludes thus,

And wiſer than all us
He knows what Lady

the reader expects it will conclude, — what Lady is painted. No, juſt the contrary,

What Lady is not painted, ſatirically inſinuating, that that is a better Proof of the goodneſs

Shortly no lad ſhall chuck, or lady vole,
But ſome exciſing Courtier will have toll.
He tells what ſtrumpet places ſells for life,
What 'Squire his lands, what citizen his wife:
And laſt (which proves him wiſer ſtill than all)
What Lady's face is not a whited wall.

As one of Woodward's patients, ſick, and ſore,
I puke, I nauſeate, — yet he thruſts in more:
Trim's Europe's balance, tops the ſtateſman's part,
And talks Gazettes and Poſt-boys o'er by heart.
Like a big wife at ſight of loathſome meat
Ready to caſt, I yawn, I ſigh, and ſweat.
Then as a licens'd ſpy, whom nothing can
Silence or hurt, he libels the great Man;
Swears ev'ry place entail'd for years to come,
In ſure ſucceſſion to the day of doom:
He names the price for ev'ry office paid,
And ſays our wars thrive ill, becauſe delay'd:

of his intelligence than the other. The Reader ſees there is greater force in the uſe of theſe plain words, than in thoſe which the Imitator employs. And the reaſon is, becauſe the ſatire does not turn upon the odiouſneſs of painting; in which caſe the terms of a painted wall had given force to the expreſſion; but upon the frequency of it, which required only the ſimple mention of the thing.

VER. 152. As one of Woodward's patients,) Alluding to the effects of his uſe of oils in bilious diſorders.

That Officer are intail'd, and that there are Perpetuities of them, lasting as far
As the last day; and that great Officers
Do with the Spaniards share, and Dunkirkers.
I more amaz'd than Circes prisoners, when
They felt themselves turn beasts, felt myself then Becoming Traytor, and methought I saw
One of our Giant Statutes ope his jaw
To suck me in for hearing him: I found
That as burnt venemous Leachers do grow sound
By giving others their sores, I might grow,
Guilty, and he free: Therefore I did shew
All signs of loathing; but since I am in,
I must pay mine, and my forefathers sin
To the last farthing. Therefore to my power
Toughly and stubbornly I bear; but th' hower
Of mercy now was come: he tries to bring
Me to pay a fine to 'scape a torturing,
And says, Sir, can you spare me — ? I said, Willingly;
Nay, Sir, can you spare me a crown? Thankfully I Gave it, as ransom; but as fidlers, still,
Though they be paid to be gone, yet needs will Thrust one more jigg upon you: so did he
With his long complimental thanks vex me.

NOTES.

VER. 167. fall endlong) The sudden effect of the transformation is strongly and finely painted to the imagination; not in

Nay hints, 'tis by connivance of the Court,
That Spain robs on, and Dunkirk's ſtill a Port.
Not more amazement ſeiz'd on Circe's gueſts,
To ſee themſelves fall endlong into beaſts,
Than mine, to find a ſubject ſtay'd and wiſe
Already half turn'd traytor by ſurprize.
I felt th' infection ſlide from him to me,
As in the pox, ſome give it to get free;
And quick to ſwallow me, methought I ſaw
One of our Giant Statutes ope its jaw,
In that nice moment, as another Lye
Stood juſt a-tilt, the Miniſter came by.
To him he flies, and bows, and bows again,
Then, cloſe as Umbra, joins the dirty train.
Not Fannius' ſelf more impudently near,
When half his noſe is in his Prince's ear.
I quak'd at heart; and ſtill afraid, to ſee
All the Court fill'd with ſtranger things than he,
Ran out as faſt, as one that pays his bail
And dreads more actions, hurries from a jail.
Bear me, ſome God! oh quickly bear me hence
To wholſome Solitude, the nurſe of ſenſe:

And the Prerogative of my Crown; ſcant
His thanks were ended, when I (which did ſee
All the Court fill'd with more ſtrange things than he)
Ran from thence with ſuch, or more haſt than one
Who fears more actions, doth haſt from priſon.
At home in wholeſome ſolitarineſs
My piteous ſoul began the wretchedneſs
Of ſuiters at court to mourn, and a trance
Like his, who dreamt he ſaw hell, did advance
It ſelf o'er me: ſuch men as he ſaw there
I ſaw at court, and worſe and more. Low fear
Becomes the guilty, not th' accuſer: Then,
Shall I, none's ſlave, of high-born or rais'd men
Fear frowns; and my miſtreſs truth, betray thee
For th' huffing, bragart, puft nobility?
No, no, thou which ſince yeſterday haſt been,

O quickly bear me hence.

Where Contemplation prunes her ruffled wings,
And the free ſoul looks down to pity Kings!
There ſober thought purſu'd th' amuſing theme,
Till Fancy colour'd it, and form'd a Dream.
A Viſion hermits can to Hell tranſport,
And forc'd ev'n me to ſee the damn'd at Court.
Not Dante dreaming all th' infernal ſtate,
Beheld ſuch ſcenes of envy, ſin, and hate.
Baſe Fear becomes the guilty, not the free;
Suits Tyrants, Plunderers, but ſuits not me:
Shall I, the Terror of this ſinful town,
Care, if a liv'ry'd Lord or ſmile or frown?
Who cannot flatter, and deteſt who can,
Tremble before a noble Serving-man?
O my fair miſtreſs, Truth! ſhall I quit thee
For huffing, braggart, puft Nobility?
Thou, who ſince yeſterday haſt roll'd o'er all
The buſy, idle blockheads of the ball,
Haſt thou, oh Sun! beheld an emptier ſort,
Than ſuch as ſwell this bladder of a court?

VER. 188, There (ſober thought) Theſe two lines are remarkable for the delicacy and propriety of the expreſſion.

VER. 194. Baſe Fear) Theſe four admirable lines become the high office he had aſſumed, and ſo nobly ſuſtained.

Think he which made your [1] Waxen garden, and Tranſported it from Italy, to ſtand
With us at London, flouts our Courtiers; for Juſt ſuch gay painted things, which no ſap, nor

'Tis ten a Clock and paſt; all whom the mues,
Baloun, or tennis, diet, or the ſtews
Had all the morning held, now the ſecond
Time made ready, that day, in flocks are found
In the Preſence, and I (God pardon me)
As freſh and ſweet their Apparels be, as be
Their fields they ſold to buy them. For a king
Thoſe hoſe are, cry the flatterers: and bring Them next week to the theatre to ſell.
Wants reach all ſtates: me ſeems they do as well

Now pox on thoſe who ſhew a Court in wax!
It ought to bring all courtiers on their backs:
Such painted puppets! ſuch a varniſh'd race
Of hollow gew-gaws, only dreſs and face!
Such waxen noſes, ſtately ſtaring things —
No wonder ſome folks bow, and think them Kings.

See! where the Britiſh youth, engag'd no more
At Fig's, at White's, with felons, or a whore,
Pay their laſt duty to the Court, and come
All freſh and fragrant, to the drawing-room;
In hues as gay, and odours as divine,
As the fair fields they ſold to look ſo fine.
"That's velvet for a King!" the flatt'rer ſwears;
'Tis true, for ten days hence 'twill be King Lear's.
Our Court may juſtly to our ſtage give rules,
That helps it both to fools-coats and to fools.
And why not players ſtrut in courtiers cloaths?
For theſe are actors too, as well as thoſe:
Wants reach all ſtates; they beg but better dreſt,
And all is ſplendid poverty at beſt.

At ſtage, as courts; all are players. Whoe'er looks

The Ladies come. As pirates (which do know
That there came weak ſhips fraught with Cutchanel)
The men board them; and praiſe (as they think) well,
Their beauties; they the mens wits; both are bought
Why good wits ne'er wear ſcarlet gowns 4, I thought
This cauſe, Theſe men, mens wits for ſpeeches buy,
And women buy all red which ſcarlets dye.
He call'd her beauty lime-twigs, her hair net:
She fears her drugs ill lay'd, her hair looſe ſet 5.
Wouldn't Heraclitus laugh to ſee Macrine
From hat to ſhoe, himſelf at door refine,
As if the Preſence were a Moſque: and lift
His ſkirts and hoſe, and call his clothes to ſhrift,
Making them confeſs not only mortal
Great ſtains and holes in them, but venial
Feathers and duſt, wherewith they fornicate:
And then by Durer's rules ſurvey the ſtate

Perfect as Circles [6], with ſuch nicety
As a young Preacher at his firſt time goes
To preach, he enters, and a lady which owes.
Him not ſo much as good will, he arreſts,
And unto her proteſts, proteſts, proteſts,
So much as at Rome would ſerve to have thrown

For ſaying our Lady's Pſalter. But 'tis fit
That they each other plague, they merit it.
But here comes Glorious that will plague them both,
Who in the other extreme only doth

Whoſe cloak his ſpurs tear, or whom he ſpits on,
He cares not, he. His ill words do no harm
To him; he ruſhes in, as if Arm, arm,
He meant to cry; and though his face be as ill

Convicted of that mortal crime, a hole;
Or ſhould one pound of powder leſs beſpread

Thus finiſh'd, and corrected to a hair,
They march, to prate their hour before the Fair.
So firſt to preach a white-glov'd Chaplain goes,
With band of Lily, and with cheek of Roſe,
Sweeter than Sharon, in immac'late trim,
Neatneſs itſelf impertinent in him.
Let but the Ladies ſmile, and they are bleſt:
Prodigious! how the things proteſt, proteſt:
Peace, fools, or Gonſon will for Papiſts ſeize you,
If once he catch you at your Jeſu! Jeſu!

Nature made ev'ry Fop to plague his brother,
Juſt as one Beauty mortifies another.
But here's the Captain that will plague them both,
Whoſe air cries Arm! whoſe very look's an oath:
The Captain's honeſt, Sirs, and that's enough,
Tho' his ſoul's bullet, and his body buff,
He ſpits fore-right; his haughty cheſt before,
Like batt'ring rams, beats open ev'ry door:
And with a face as red, and as awry,
As Herod's hang-dogs in old Tapeſtry,

He ſtrives to look worſe; he keeps all in awe;
Jeſts like a licens'd foo commands like law.
Tir'd, now I leave this place, and but pleas'd ſo
As men from gaols to execution go,
Go, through the great chamber (why is it hung
With the ſeven deadly ſins?) being among Thoſe Aſkaparts 7, men big enough to throw
Charing-Croſs for a bar, men that do know
No token of worth, but Queens man, and fine

Seas of Wit and Arts, you can, then dare,
Drown the ſins of this place, but as for me
Which am but a ſcant brook, enough ſhall be

Confounds the civil, keeps the rude in awe,
Jeſts like a licens'd fool, commands like law.

Frighted, I quit the room, but leave it ſo
As men from Jayls to execution go;
For hung with deadly ſins I ſee the wall,
A lin'd with Giants deadlier than 'em all:
Each man an Aſkapart, of ſtrength to toſs
For Quoits, both Temple-bar and Charing-croſs.
Scar'd at the grizly forms, I ſweat, I fly,
And ſhake all o'er, like a diſcover'd ſpy.

Courts are too much for wits ſo weak as mine:
Charge them with Heav'n's Artill'ry, bold Divine!
From ſuch alone the Great rebukes endure,
Whoſe Satire's ſacred, and whoſe rage ſecure:
'Tis mine to waſh a few light ſtains, but theirs
To deluge ſin, and drown a Court in tears.

DIALOGUE I.

FR. NOT twice a twelve-month you appear in Print,
And when it comes, the Court see nothing in't.

VARIATIONS.

After v. 2. in the MS.

You don't I hope, pretend to quit the trade,
Because you think your reputation made:
Like good  of whom so much was said,
That when his name was up, he lay a-bed.
Come, come, refresh us with a livelier son,
Or like * * you'll lie a-bed too long.

NOTES.

VER. 1. Not twice a twelve-month &c.) These two lines are from Horace; and the only lines that are so in the whole Poem; being meant to give a handle to that which follows in the character of an impertinent Censurer,

'Tis all from Horace; &c. P.

VER. 2. the Court see nothing in't.) He chose this expression for the sake of its elegant and satiric ambiguity. His writings abound in them.

VER. 9. And taught his Romans, in much better metre: „To laugh at Fools who put their trust in Peter.„) The general turn of the thought is from Boileau,

Avant lui, Juvénal avoit dit en Latin,
Qu'on est assis à l'aise aux sermons de Cotin.

You grow correct, that once with Rapture writ,
And are, beſides, too moral for a Wit.
Decay of Parts, alas! we all muſt feel —
Why now, this moment, don't I ſee you ſteal?
'Tis all from Horace; Horace long before ye
Said, "Tories call'd him Whig, and Whigs a Tory;"
And taught his Romans, in much better metre,
"To laugh at Fools who put their truſt in Peter."

But Horace, Sir, was delicate, was nice;
Bubo obſerves, he laſh no ſort of Vice;
Horace would ſay, Sir Billy ſerv'd the Crown,
Blunt could do Buſ'neſs, H-ggins knew the Town;
In Sappho touch the Failings of the Sex,
In rev'rend Biſhops note ſome ſmall Neglects,
And own, the Spaniard did a waggiſh thing,

VARIATIONS.

P. Sir, what I write, ſhould be correctly writ.
F. Correct! 'tis what no genius can admit.
Beſides, you grow too moral for a Wit.

NOTES.

But the irony in the first line, and the ſatirical equivoque in the ſecond, mark them for his own. His making the objector ſay, that Horace excelled him in writing verſe, is pleaſant. And the ambiguity of putting their truſt in Peter, inſinuates that Horace and he had frequently laughed at that ſpecific folly ariſing from indolence, which ſtill diſpoſes men to intruſt their ſpiritual and temporal concerns to the abſolute diſpoſal of any ſanctified or unſanctified cheat, bearing the name of PETER.

VER. 12. Bubo obſerves,) Some guilty perſon very fond of making ſuch an obſervation. P.

VER. 14. H—ggins) Formerly Jaylor of the Fleet priſon, enriched himſelf by many exactions, for which he was tried and expelled. P.

Who cropt our Ears, and ſent them to the King.
His ſly, polite, inſinuating ſtyle
Could pleaſe at Court, and make AUGUSTUS ſmile:
An artful Manager, that crept between
His Friend and Shame, and was a kind of Screen.
But 'faith your very Friends will ſoon be ſore;
Patriots there are, who wiſh you'd jeſt no more —
And where's the Glory? 'twill be only thought
The Great man never offer'd you a groat.
Go ſee Sir ROBERT —

P. See Sir ROBERT! — hum —
And never laugh — for all my life to come?

NOTES.

VER. 18. Who cropt our Ears,) Said to be executed by the Captain of a Spaniſh ſhip on one Jenkins a Captain of an Engliſh one. He cut off his ears, and bid him carry them to the King his maſter. P.

VER. 22. Screen,)

Tangit, & admiſſus circum præcordia ludit. Perſ. P.

Ibid. Screen.) A metaphor peculiarly appropriated to a certain perſon in power. P.

VER. 24. Patriots there are, &c.) This appellation was generally given to thoſe in oppoſition to the Court. Though ſome of them (which our author hints at) had views too mean and intereſted to deſerve that name. P.

VER. 26. The Great man) A phraſe, by common uſe, appropriated to the firſt miniſter. P.

VER. 29. Seen him I have, &c.) This and other ſtrokes of commendation in the following poem, as well as his regard to him on all occaſions, were in acknowledgment of a certain ſervice the Miniſter had done a Prieſt at Mr. Pope's ſolicitation. Our Poet, when he was about ſeventeen, had a very ill fever in the country, which, it was feared, would end fatally. In this condition, he wrote to Southcot; a Prieſt of his acquaintance,

Seen him I have, but in his happier hour
Of Social Pleaſure, ill-exchang'd for Pow'r;
Seen him, uncumber'd with the Venal tribe,
Smile without Art, and win without a Bribe.
Would he oblige me? let me only find,
He does not think me what he thinks mankind.

NOTES.

then in town, to take his laſt leave of him. Southcot with great affection and ſolicitude applied to Dr. Radcliffe for his advice. And not content with that, he rode down poſt, to Mr. Pope, who was then an hundred miles from London, with the Doctor's directions; which had the deſired effect. A long time after this Southcot, who had an intereſt in the Court of France, writing to a common acquaintance in England, informed him that there was a good Abbey near Avignon, which he had credit enough to get, were it not from an apprehenſion that his promotion would give umbrage to the Pretender's ſervice, was become very obnoxious. The perſon to whom this was written happening to acquaint Mr. Pope with the caſe he immediately wrote to Sir Robert Walpole about it; begged that this embargo might be taken off; and acquainted him with the grounds of ſolicitation: That he was indebted to Southcot for his life, and he muſt diſcharge his obligation, either here or in purgatory. The Miniſter received the application favourably, and with much good-nature wrote to his brother, then in France, to remove this obſtruction. In conſequence of which Southcot get the Abbey. Mr. Pope ever after retained a grateful ſenſe of his civility.

VER. 31. Seen him, uncumber'd) Theſe two verſes were originally in the poem, though omitted in all the firſt editions. P.

VER. 34. what he thinks mankind.) This requeſt ſeems ſomewhat abſurd: but not more ſo than the principle it refers to. That great Miniſter, it ſeems, thought all mankind Rogues; and that every one had his penetration, and extenſive knowledge of the world. Others perhaps would think it an inſtance of a narrow underſtanding, that, from a few of Rochefaucault's maxims, and the corrupt practice of thoſe he commonly converſed with, would Come, come, at all I laugh he laughs, no doubt;

The only diff'rence is, I dare laugh out.
F. Why yes: with Scripture ſtill you may be free;
A Horſe-laugh, if you pleaſe, at Honeſty;
A Joke on JEKYL, or ſome odd Old Whig
Who never chang'd his Principle, or Wig:
A Patriot is a Fool in ev'ry age,
Whom all Lord Chamberlains allow the Stage:
Theſe nothing hurts; they keep their Faſhion ſtill,
And wear their ſtrange old Virtue, as they will.
If any aſk you, "Who's the Man, ſo near "His Prince, that writes in Verſe, and has his ear?"

NOTES.

thus boldly pronounce upon the character of his Species. It is certain, that a Keeper of Newgate, who ſhould make the ſame concluſion, would be heartily laughed at.

VER. 37. Why yes: with Scripture &c.) A ſcribler, whoſe only chance for reputation is the falling in with the faſhion, is apt to employ this infamous expedient for the preſervation of his fleeting exiſtence. But a true Genius could not do a fooliſher thing, or ſooner defeat his own aim. The ſage Boileau uſed to ſay on this occaſion, „Une ouvrage ſevere peut bien plaire aux „libertins; mais un ouvrage trop libre ne plaira jamais aux per„ſonnes ſeveres.„

Ibid. Why yes: with Scripture ſtill you may be free;) Thus the Man commonly called Mother Oſborn, who was in the Miniſter's pay, and wrote Journals; for one Paper in behalf of Sir Robert, had frequently two againſt J. C.

VER. 39. A Joke on Jekyl,) Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Maſter of the Rolls, a true Whig in his principles, and a man of the utmoſt probity. He ſometimes voted againſt the Court, which drew upon him the laugh here deſcribed of ONE who beſtowed it equally upon Religion and Honeſty. He died a few months after the publication of this poem. P.

VER. 43. Theſe nothing hurts;) i. e. offends.

Why, anſwer, LYTTELTON, and I'll engage

But were his Verſes vile, his Whiſper baſe,
You'd quickly find him in Lord Fanny's caſe.

But well may put ſome Stateſmen in a fury.

To Vice and Folly to confine the jeſt,

Did not the Sneer of more impartial men

VER. 66. Henley — Osborn,) See them in their places in the Dunciad. P.

VER. 69. The gracious Dew) Alludes to ſome court ſermons, and florid panegyrical ſpeeches; particularly one very full of puerilities and flatteries; which afterwards got into an addreſs in the ſame pretty ſtyle; and was laſtly ſerved up in an Epitaph, between Latin and Engliſh, publiſhed by its author. P.

VER. 69. The gracious Dew of Pulpit Eloquence,) Our moral Bard was no great Adept in Theology, nor did he enter into the depths of Pulpit Eloquence. Which (and it is much to be lamented) rendered his judgment of things, on certain occaſions, but ſlight and ſuperficial. It is plain he here gibeth at this maſterſtroke of Pulpit Eloquence. But Maſter Doctor Thomas Playfere might have taught him better. This eminent court-diving in his Spittal-ſermon preached in the year 1595, layeth open the whole ſecret of this matter. „The voice of a preacher (ſaith he, him-„ſelf a powerfull preacher) ought to be the voice of a Crier, which „ſhould not pipe to make the people dance, but mourne to „make them weep. Hence it is, that in the oulde law none that „was blinde, or had anie blemiſhe in his eye, might ſerve at the „Aulter; becauſe for that impedimente in his eye he could not „well ſhew his inwarde ſorrowing by his outwarde weeping. „And when they offered up their firſt borne, who was ordinarily in „every family their Prieſte, or their Preacher, they offered alſo „with him a paire of turtle-doves, or two younge pigeons. That „paire of turtle-doves did ſignify a paire of mournful eyes; thoſe „two younge pigeons did ſignifie likewiſe two weeping eyes: „And at that offering they prayed for their firſt-borne, that af-„terwards he might have ſuch eyes himſelfe. For indeed, as Auſtin „witneſſeth, THERE IS MORE GOOD TO BE DONE „with ſighing than with ſpeaking, with weeping than with words. „Plus gemitibus quam ſermonibus, plus fletu quam affatu.„

VER. 80. Carolina) Queen conſort to King George II. She died in 1737. Her death gave occaſion, as is obſerved above, to many indiſcreet and mean performances unworthy of her memory, whoſe laſt moments manifeſted the utmoſt courage and reſolution. P.

How highly our Poet thought of that truly great perſonage may be ſeen by one of his letters to Mr. Allen, written at that time; in which amongſt others, equally reſpectful, are the following words: „The Queen ſhewed, by the confeſſion of all about „her, the utmoſt firmneſs and temper to her laſt moments, and „through the courſe of great torments. What character hiſtorians „will allow her, I do not know; but all her domeſtic ſervants, „and thoſe neareſt her, give her the beſt teſtimony, that of ſincere „tears.„

And let, a God's-name, ev'ry Fool and Knave
Be grac'd thro' Life, and flatter'd in his Grave.
F. Why so? if Satire knows its Time and Place,
You still may lash the greatest — in Disgrace:
For Merit will by turns forsake them all;
Would you know when? exactly when they fall.
But let all Satire in all Changes spare
Immortal S — k, and grave De —— re.
Silent and soft, as Saints remove to Heav'n,
All Tyes dissolv'd, and ev'ry Sin forgiv'n,
These may some gentle ministerial Wing

There, where no Passion, Pride, or Shame transport,

NOTES.

VER. 84. No Gazetteer more innocent than I.) The Gazetteer is one of the low appendices to the Secretary of State's office, to write the government's news-paper, published by Authority. Sir Richard Steel had once this post. And he describes the condition of it very well, in the Apology for himself and his writings: „My next appearance as a writer was in the quality of „the lowest minister of state, to wit, in the Office of Gazetteer; „where I worked faithfully, according to order, without ever „erring against the rule observed by all ministers, to keep that „paper very innocent and very insipid. It was to the reproaches „I heard every Gazette day against the writer of it, that I owe „the fortitude of being remarkably negligent of what people say „which I do not deserve."

VER. 92. Immortal S—k, and grave De—re!) A title given that Lord by King James II. He was of the Bedchamber to King William; he was so to King George I. he was so to King Georg II. This Lord was very skilful in all the forms of the House, in which he discharged himself with great gravity. P.

VER. 97. There, where no Passion, &c.) The excellent writer De l'Esprit des Loix gives the following character of the Spirit of

Virtue, I grant you, is an empty boaſt;
But ſhall the Dignity of Vice be loſt?
Ye Gods! ſhall Cibber's Son, without rebuke,

Shall Ward draw Contracts with a Stateſman's ſkill?
Or Japhet pocket, like his Grace, a Will?
Is it for Bond, or Peter, (paltry things)

of ill luck, came one morning early into his maſter's bed-chamber, with two loaded piſtols. And, as Engliſhmen do not underſtand raillery in a caſe of this nature, told the philoſopher, on preſenting him with one of his piſtols, that now was come the time to put his doctrine in practice: that as to himſelf having loſt his laſt ſtake he was become an uſeleſs member in ſociety, and ſo was reſolved to quit his ſtation; and that, as to him, his guide, philoſopher, and friend, ſurrounded with miſeries, the outcaſt of government, and the ſport even of that Chance which he adored, he doubtleſs would rejoice for ſuch an opportunity to bear him company. All this was ſaid and done with ſo much reſolution and ſolemnity, that the Italian found himſelf under a neceſſity to cry out murder, which brought in Company to his relief. — This unhappy man at laſt died a penitent.

VER. 135. Let humble ALLEN with an aukward Shame, — Do good by ſtealth, and bluſh to find it Fame.) The true Character of our Author's moral pieces, conſidered as a ſupplement to human laws (the force of which they have deſervedly obtained) is, that his praiſe is always delicate, and his reproof never miſplaced: and therefore the firſt not reaching the head, and the latter too ſenſibly touching the heart of his vulgar readers, have made him cenſured as a cold Panegyriſt, and a cauſtic Satiriſt; whereas, indeed, he was the warmeſt friend, and the moſt placable enemy.

The lines above have been commonly given as an inſtance of this ungenerous backwardneſs in doing juſtice to merit. And, indeed, if fairly given, would bear hard upon the Author, who believed the perſon here celebrated to be one of the greateſt characters in private life that ever was; and known by him to be, in fact, all, and much more than he had feigned in the imaginary virtues of the man of Roſs. One, who, whether he be conſidered in his civil, ſocial, domeſtic, or religious character, is, in all theſe views, an ornament to human nature.

And, indeed, we ſhall ſee, that what is here ſaid of him agrees only with ſuch a Character. But as both the thought and the expreſſion have been cenſured, we ſhall conſider them in their order.

Let humble ALLEN, with an aukward Shame,
Do good by ſtealth —

This encomium has been called obſcure (as well as penurious.) It may be ſo; not from any defect in the conception, but from the deepneſs of the ſenſe; and, what may ſeem more ſtrange, (as we ſhall ſee afterwards) from the elegance of phraſe, and exactneſs of expreſſion. We are ſo abſolutely governed by cuſtom, that to act contrary to it, creates even in virtuous men, who are ever modeſt, a kind of diffidence, which is the parent of Shame. But when, to this, there is joined a conſciouſneſs that,

Do good by ſtealth, and bluſh to find it Fame.
Virtue may chuſe the high or low Degree,
'Tis juſt alike to Virtue, and to me;
Dwell in a Monk, or light upon a King,
She's ſtill the ſame, belov'd, contented thing.
Vice is undone, if ſhe forgets her Birth,
And ſtoops from Angels to the Dregs of Earth:
But 'tis the Fall degrades her to a Whore;

NOTES.

in forſaking cuſtom, you follow truth and reaſon, the indignation ariſing from ſuch a conſcious virtue, mixing with ſhame, produces that amiable awkwardneſs, in going out of the faſhion, which the Poet, here, celebrates:

and bluſh to find it Fame,

i. e. He bluſhed at the degeneracy of his times, which, at beſt, gave his goodneſs its due commendation (the thing he never aimed at) inſtead of following and imitating his example, which was the reaſon why ſome acts of it were not done by ſtealth, but more openly.

So far as to the thought: but it will be ſaid, tantamne rem tam negligenter?

And this will lead us to ſay ſomething concerning the expreſſion, which will clear up what remains of the difficulty. Theſe lines, and thoſe which precede and follow them, contain an ironical neglect of Virtue, and an ironical concern and care for Vice. So that the Poet's elegant correctneſs of compoſition required, that his language, in the firſt caſe, ſhould preſent ſomething of negligence and cenſure; which is admirably implied in the expreſſion of the thought.

VER. 138. 'Tis juſt alike to Virtue, and to me;) He gives the reaſon for it, in the line that preſently follows,

She's ſtill the ſame, belov'd: contented thing.

So that the ſenſe of the text is this, „It is all one to Virtue on „whom her influence falls, whether on high or low, becauſe it „ſtill produces the ſame effect, their content; and it is all one to „me, becauſe it ſtill produces the ſame effect, my love.„

Let Greatneſs own her, and ſhe's mean no more,
Her Birth, her Beauty, Crowds and Courts confeſs, 145

NOTES.

VER. 144. Let Greatneſs own her, and ſhe's mean no more,) The Poet, in this whole paſſage, would be underſtood to allude to a very extraordinary ſtory told by Procopius in his Secret hiſtory: the ſum of which is as follows.

The Empreſs THEODORA was the daughter of one Acaces, who had the care of the wild beaſts, which the Green faction kept for the entertainment of the people. For the Empire was, at that time, divided between the two Factions of the Green and Blue. But Acaces dying in the infancy of Theodora, and her two Siſters, his place of Maſter of the Bears was diſpoſed of to a ſtranger; and his widow had no other way of ſupporting herſelf than by proſtituting her three Daughters, who were all very pretty, on the public Theatre. Thither ſhe brought them in their turns as they came to years of puberty. Theodora firſt attended her Siſters in the habit and quality of a ſlave. And when it came to her turn to mount the ſtage, as ſhe could neither dance, nor play on the flute, ſhe was put into the loweſt claſs of Buffoons to make diverſion for the Rabble; which ſhe did in ſo arch a manner, and complained of the indignities ſhe ſuffered in ſo ridiculous a tone, that ſhe became the abſolute favourite of the people. After a complete courſe of infamy and proſtitution, the next place we hear of her is at Alexandria, in great poverty and diſtreſs: from whence (as it was no wonder) ſhe was willing to remove. And to Conſtantinople ſhe came, but after a large circuit thro' the Eaſt, where ſhe worked her way, by a free courſe of proſtitution. JUSTINIAN was at this time conſort in the Empire with his Uncle Juſtin, and the management of affairs entirely in his hands. He no ſooner ſaw Theodora than he fell deſperately in love with her, and would have married her immediately, but that the Empreſs Euphemia, a barbarian, and unpolite, but not illiberal in her nature, was then alive. And ſhe, altho' ſhe rarely denied him any thing, yet obſtinately refuſed giving him this inſtance of her complaiſance. But ſhe did not live long: and then, nothing but the ancient Laws, which forbad a ſenator to marry with a common proſtitute, hindered Juſtinian from executing this extraordinary project. Theſe, he obliged Juſtin to revoke; and then, in the face of the ſun, married his dear Theodora. A terrible example (ſays the Hiſtorian) and an encouragement to the moſt ſhameleſs licence. And now no ſooner was THEODORA (in the Poet's phraſe) owned by Greatneſs, than ſhe, whom not long before it was thought unlucky to meet, and a pollution to touch, became the idol of the Court. There was not a ſingle Magiſtrate (ſays Procopius) that expreſſed the leaſt indignation at the ſhame and diſhonour brought upon the ſtate; not a ſingle Prelate that ſhewed the leaſt deſolation for the public ſcandal. They all drove to court ſo precipitately, as if they were ſtriving to prevent one another in her good graces. Nay, the very ſoldiers were emulous of the honour of becoming the Champions of her Virtue. As for the common people, who had ſo long been the ſpectators of her ſerviliry, her Buffoonry, and her Proſtitution, they all in a body threw themſelves at her feet, as ſlaves at the footſtool of their Miſtreſs. In a word, there was no man, of what condition ſoever, that ſhewed the leaſt diſlike of ſo monſtrous an elevation. In the mean time, Theodora's firſt care was to fill her Coffers, which ſhe ſoon did, with immenſe wealth. To this end, Juſtinian and ſhe pretended to differ in their principles. The one protected the blue, and the other, the green faction; till in a long courſe of intrigue, by ſometimes giving up the one to plunder and confiſcation, and ſometimes the other, they left nothing to either party. See Procop. Anec. c. ix — x.

VER. 148. And hers the Goſpel is, and hers the Laws,) i. e. She diſpoſed of the honours of both.

VER. 149. ſcarlet head) Alluding to the ſcarlet Whore of the Apocalypſe.

Old England's Genius, rough with many a Scar,
Dragg'd in the duſt! his arms hang idly round,
His Flag inverted trails along the ground!
Our Youth, all liv'ry'd o'er with foreign Gold,
Before her dance: behind her, crawl the Old!
See thronging Millions to the Pagod run,
And offer Country, Parent, Wife, or Son!
Hear her black Trumpet thro' the Land proclaim,
That NOT TO BE CORRUPTED IS THE SHAME.
In Soldier, Churchman, Patriot, Man in Pow'r,
'Tis Av'rice all, Ambition is no more!
See, all our Nobles begging to be Slaves!
See, all our Fools aſpiring to be Knaves!
The Wit of Cheats, the Courage of a Whore,
Are what ten thouſand envy and adore:
All, all look up, with reverential Awe,
At Crimes that 'ſcape, or triumph o'er the Law:
While Truth, Worth, Wiſdom, daily they decry —
"Nothing is Sacred now but Villainy."
Yet may this Verſe (if ſuch a Verſe remain)
Show, there was one who held it in diſdain.

NOTES.

VER. 164. See, all our fools aſpiring to be Knaves!) This will always be the caſe when knavery is in faſhion, becauſe fools always dread the being unfaſhionable, VER. 165. The Wit of Cheats, the Courage of a Whore, — Are what ten thouſand envy and adore:) And no wonder, for the wit of Cheats being the evaſion of Juſtice, and the Courage of a Whore the contempt for reputation; theſe emancipate men from the two tyrannical reſtraints upon free ſpirits, fear of puniſhment, and dread of ſhame. EPILOGUE

TO THE

SATIRES.

Written in MDCCXXXVIII.

DIALOGUE II.

Fr. 'TIS all a Libel — Paxton (Sir) will ſay.
P. Not yet, my Friend! to morrow 'faith it may;
And for that very cauſe I print to day.
How ſhould I fret to mangle ev'ry line,
In rev'rence to the Sins of Thirty nine!
Vice with ſuch Giant ſtrides comes on amain,
Invention ſtrives to be before in vain;
Feign what I will, and paint it e'er ſo ſtrong,
Some riſing Genius ſins up to my Song.

NOTES.

VER. 1. Paxton) Late ſollicitor to the Treaſury.

VER. 8. Feign what I will, etc.) The Poet has here introduced an oblique apology for himſelf with great art. You attack perſonal characters, ſay his enemies. No, replies he, I paint merely from my invention; and, to prevent a likeneſs, I then aggravate the features. But alas! the growth of vice is ſo monſtrouſly ſudden, that it riſes up to a reſemblance before I can get from the preſs.

F. Yet none but you by Name the guilty laſh;
Ev'n Guthry ſaves half Newgate by a Daſh.
Spare then the Perſon, and expoſe the Vice.
P. How, Sir! not damn the Sharper, but the Dice?
Come on then, Satire? gen'ral, unconfin'd,
Spread thy broad wing, and ſouce on all the kind.
Ye Stateſmen, Prieſts, of one Religion all!
Ye Tradeſmen, vile, in Army, Court, or Hall!
Ye Rev'rend Atheiſts. F. Scandal! name them, Who?
P. Why that's the thing you bid me not to do.
Who ſtarv'd a Siſter, who forſwore a Debt,
I never nam'd; the Town's enquiring yet.
The pois'ning Dame— F. You mean — P. I. don't.
F. You do.
P. See, Now I keep the Secret, and not you!
The bribing Stateſman — F. Hold, too high you go.
P. The brib'd Elector — F. There you ſtoop too low.
P. I fain would pleaſe you, if I knew with what;
Tell me, which Knave is lawful Game, which not?

NOTES.

VER. 11. Ev'n Guthry) The Ordinary of Newgate, who publiſhes the Memoirs of the Malefactors, and is often prevailed upon to be ſo tender of their reputation, as to ſet down no more than the initials of their name. P.

VER. 13. How, Sir! not damn the Sharper, but the Dice!) The livelineſs of the reply may excuſe the bad reaſoning; otherwiſe the dice, tho' they rhyme to vice, can never ſtand for it, which his argument requires they ſhould do. For the dice are only the inſtruments of fraud; but the queſtion is not, whether the inſtrument, but whether the act committed by it, ſhould be expoſed; inſtead of the perſon.

VER. 26. I fain would pleaſe you, if I knew with what; — Tell me, which Knave is lawful Game, which not?) I have obſerved, that our author has invented, and introduced, into his writings, a new ſpecies of the ſublime, by heightening it with wit. There is a ſpecies of elegance in his works (of which theſe lines are an inſtance) almoſt as peculiar to him, which he has produced by employing the ſimpleſt and triteſt phraſes to prevent ſtiffneſs, and yet, by a ſupreme effort of his art, giving them the dignity of the choiceſt. Quintilian was ſo ſenſible of the luſtre which this throws upon true eloquence under a maſterly direction, and of the prejudices againſt it from the difficulty of ſucceeding in it; that he ſays, Utinam — et verba in uſu quotidiano poſita minus timeremus.

VER. 28. Muſt great Offenders, etc.) The caſe is archly put. Thoſe who eſcape public juſtice being the particular property of the Satiriſt.

VER. 29. like Royal Harts, etc.) Alluding to the old Gamelaws, when our Kings ſpent all the time they could ſpare from human ſlaughter, in Woods and Foreſts.

VER. 31. As Beaſts of Nature may we hunt the Squires?) The expreſſion is rough, like the ſubject, but no reflection: For if beaſts of Nature, then not beaſts of their own making; a fault too frequently objected to country Squires. However, the Latin is nobler, Ferae naturae, Things uncivilized, and free. Ferae, as the Critics ſay, being from the Hebrew, Pere, Aſinus ſilveſtris. SCRIBL.

VER. 35. You hurt a man that's riſing in the Trade.) For, as the reaſonable De la Bruyere obſerves, „Qui ne ſait être un „ERASME, doit penſer à être Evêque.„ SCRIBL.

P. If not the Tradeſman who ſet up to day,
Much leſs the 'Prentice who to morrow may.
Down, down, proud Satire! tho' a Realm be ſpoil'd,
Arraign no mightier Thief than wretched Wild;
Or, if a Court or Country's made a job,
Go drench a Pick-pocket, and join the Mob.

But, Sir, I beg you (for the Love of Vice!
The matter's weighty, pray conſider twice;
Have you leſs pity for the needy Cheat,
The poor and friendleſs Villain, than the Great?
Alas! the ſmall Diſcredit of a Bribe
Scarce hurts the Lawyer, but undoes the Scribe.
Then better ſure it Charity becomes
To tax Directors, who (thank God) have Plums;
Still better, Miniſters; or, if the thing
May pinch ev'n there — why lay it on a King.

F. Stop! ſtop!

P. Muſt Satire, then, nor riſe nor fall!
Speak out, and bid me blame no Rogues at all.

F. Yes, ſtrike that Wild, I'll juſtify the blow.

NOTES.

VER. 39. wretched Wild,) Jonathan Wild, a famous Thief, and Thief-Impeacher, who was at laſt caught in his own train and hanged. P.

VER. 42. for the love of Vice) We muſt conſider the Poet as here directing his diſcourſe to a follower of the new ſyſtem of Politics, That private vices are public benefits. SCRIBL.

VER. 51. why lay it on a King) He is ſerious in the foregoing ſubjects of ſatire; but ironical here, and only alludes to the common practice of Miniſters, in laying their own miſcarriages on their maſters.

P. Strike? why the man was hang'd ten years ago:
Ev'n Peter trembles only for his Ears.
F. What always Peter? Peter thinks you mad,
You make men desp'rate, if they once are bad:
Else might he take to Virtue some years hence—
P. As S—k, If he lives, will love the PRINCE.
F. Strange spleen to S—k!
P. Do I wrong the Man?
God knows, I praise a Courtier where I can.
When I confess, there is who feels for Fame.
And melts to Goodness, need I SCARB'ROW name?
Pleas'd let me own, in Esher's peaceful Grove

NOTES.

VER. 55. Strike? why the man was hang'd ten years ago:) The line is exquisite. The high humour of it, in the unexpected turn, is but it's second praise. It finely carries on the argument, and exposes the false rules and measures of satire. his Court Friend would inculcate for his practice: which insinuate, that he is to avoid the proper object of satire, great offenders, who have escaped public justice; and, in their stead, to seize the little rogues, who have submitted to it.

VER. 57. Ev'n Peter trembles only for his ears,) Peter had, the year before this, narrowly escaped the Pillory for forgery: and got off with a severe rebuke only from the bench. P.

VER. 64. feels for Fame, And melts to goodness) This is a fine compliment; the expression shewing, that fame was but his second passion.

VER. 65. Scarb'row) Earl of, and Knight of the Garter, whose personal attachments to the king appeared from his steddy adherence to the royal interest, after his resignation of his great employment of Master of the Horse; and whose known honour and virtue made him esteemed by all parties. P.

a more amiable idea of his Character than in comparing him to Mr. Craggs. P.

VER. 67. Kent and Nature) Means no more than art and nature. And in this conſiſts the compliment to the Artiſt.

VER. 71. Secker is decent) Theſe words (like thoſe v. 135. of the firſt Dialogue) are another inſtance of the malignity of the public judgment. The Poet thought, and not without reaſon, that they conveyed a very high idea of the worthy perſon to whom they are applied; to be DECENT (or to become every ſtation of life in which a man is placed) being the nobleſt encomium on his wiſdom and virtue. It is the very topic he employs in ſpeaking of a favourite friend, one he moſt eſteemed and loved,

Noble and young, who ſtrikes the heart,
With ev'ry ſprightly, ev'ry DECENT part.

The word in both places implying every endowment of the heart. As in that celebrated verſe of Horace, from whence the expreſſion was taken. and which no one has a better right to apply to himſelf than this excellent prelate:

Quid verum atque DECENS curo et rogo, & omnis in hoc ſum.

So that to be decent is to excell in the moral character.

VER. 74. But does the court a worthy Man remove?) The poet means, remove him for his worth: not that he eſteemed the being in or out a proof either of corruption, or virtue. „I had „a glympſe of a letter of yours lately (ſays he to Dr. Swift) by „which I find you are, like the vulgar, apter to think well of

VER. 93. Still let me ſay! No Follower, but a Friend. i. e. Unrelated to their parties, and attached only to their perſons.

VER. 99. my Lord May'r.) Sir John Barnard, Lord Mayor in the year of the Poem, 1738. A Citizen eminent for his virtue, public Spirit, and great talents in Parliament. An excellent Man, Magiſtrate, and Senator. In the year 1747, the City of London, in memory of his many and ſignal ſervices to his Country, erected a Statue to him. But his image had been placed long before in the heart of every good Man.

To find an honeſt man I beat about,
And love him, court him, praiſe him, in or out.
F. Then why ſo few commended?
P. Not ſo fierce;
Find you the Virtue, and I'll find the Verſe.
But random Praiſe — the taſk can ne'er be done;
Each Mother aſks it for her booby Son,
Each Widow aſks it for the Beſt of Men,
For him ſhe weeps, and him ſhe weeds agen.
Praiſe cannot ſtoop, like Satire, to the ground;
The Number may be hang'd, but not be crow'nd.
Enough for half the Greateſt of theſe days,
To 'ſcape my Cenſure, not expect my Praiſe.
Are they not rich? what more can they pretend?
Dare they to hope a Poet for their Friend?

No Pow'r the Muſe's Friendſhip can command;

NOTES.

VER. 102. To find an honeſt man, &c.) In this ſearch, in which he was very ſincere, it would have been well if he had not ſometimes truſted to the reports of others, who had leſs penetration, but more paſſions to gratify.

VER. 116. What Richelieu wanted, &c.) The thing here inſinuated is, that the greateſt character for Politics, Munificence or Conqueſts, when ſeparate from virtue, would never gain the praiſes of the true Poet. But munificence approaching nearer to Virtue than the other two qualities, he ſays, Louis ſcarce could gain; while Richelieu and young Ammon went without.

Ibid. Louis ſcarce could gain,) By this expreſſion finely inſinuating, that the great Boileau always falls below himſelf in thoſe paſſages where he flatters his Maſter. Of which flattery he gives an inſtance in v. 231. where the topic of adulation is exceeding childiſh and extravagant.

No Pow'r, when Virtue claims it, can withſtand:
To Cato, Virgil pay'd one honeſt line;
O let my Country's Friends illumine mine!
—What are you thinking? F. Faith the thought's no ſin,
I think your Friends are out, and would be in.
P. If merely to come in, Sir, they go out,
The way they take is ſtrangely round about.
F. They too may be corrupted, you'll allow?
P. I only call thoſe Knaves who are ſo now,
Is that too little? Come then, I'll comply —
Spirit of Arnall! aid me while I lie.
COBHAM'S a Coward, POLWARTH is a Slave.
And LYTTELTON a dark, deſigning Knave,
ST. JOHN has ever been a wealthy Fool —
But let me add, Sir ROBERT'S mighty dull,

His dantem jura Catonem.

Ibid. Virgil paid one honeſt line,) i. e. If Virgil, who was a Courtier, paid one honeſt line, how many are due from me; who am none?

VER. 121. O let my Country's Friends illumine mine!) A pretty expreſſion, alluding to the old practice of illuminating MSS. with gold and vermilion.

VER. 127. I only call thoſe Knaves who are ſo now.) He left it to Time to tell them,

Has never made a Friend in private life,
And was, beſides, a Tyrant to his Wife.
But, pray, when others praiſe him, do I blame?
Call Verres, Wolſey, any odious name?
Why rail they then, if but a Wreath of mine,
Oh All-accompliſh'd St. John! deck thy ſhrine?
What? ſhall each ſpurgall'd Hackney of the day,
When Paxton gives him double Pots and Pay,
Or each new-penſion'd Sycophant, pretend
To break my Windows if I treat a Friend?
Then wiſely plead, to me they meant no hurt,
But 'twas my Gueſt at whom they threw the dirt?
Sure, if I ſpare the Miniſter, no rules
Of Honour bind me, not to maul his Tools;
Sure, if they cannot cut, it may be ſaid
His Saws are toothleſs, and his Hatchet's Lead.
It anger'd Turenne, once upon a day,
To ſee a Footman kick'd that took his pay:

Notes.

VER. 136. do I blame? Call Verres, Wolſey, any odious name?) The Leaders of Parties, be they as florid as they will, generally do their buſineſs by a ſingle rule of Rhetoric, which they may have learnt of Quintilian, or perhaps of a much older Sophiſt, Si nihil, quod nos adjuvet, erit, quæramus quid Adverſarium lædat. SCRIBL.

VER. 141. When Paxton gives him double pots and pay,) If this band of Penſioners were ſo offenſive while embodied and under diſcipline, what muſt we think of their diſorders ſince they were diſbanded and become free-booters? No virtue nor merit hath eſcaped them. They have made a great City in the South, too much reſemble another in the North, where the products of night and darkneſs are diſcharged from Garrets on every honeſt man that comes within their reach.

But when he heard th'Affront the Fellow gave,
Knew one a Man of honour, one a Knave;
The prudent Gen'ral turn'd it to a jeſt,
And begg'd, he'd take the pains to kick the reſt:
Which not at preſent having time to do —
F. Hold Sir! for God's-ſake where's th'Affront to you?
Againſt your worſhip when had S—k writ?
Or P—ge pour'd forth the Torrent of Wit?
Or grant the Bard whoſe diſtich all commend
[In Pow'r a Servant, out of Pow'r a friend]
To W—le guilty of ſome venial ſin;
What's that to you who ne'er was out nor in?
The Prieſt whoſe Flattery be-dropt the Crown,
How hurt he you? he only ſtain'd the Gown.
And how did, pray, the florid Youth offend,
Whoſe Speech you took, and gave it to a Friend?
P. Faith, it imports not much from whom it came;
Whoever borrow'd could not be to blame,
Since the whole Houſe did afterwards the ſame.
Let Courtly Wits to Wits afford ſupply,
As Hog to Hog in Huts of Weſtphaly;
If one, thro' Nature's Bounty or his Lord's,
Has what the frugal, dirty ſoil affords,
From him the next receives it, thick or thin,
As pure a meſs almoſt as it came in;

The bleſſed benefit, not there confin'd,
Drops to the third, who nuzzles cloſe behind;
From tail to mouth, they feed and they carouſe:
The laſt full fairly gives it to the Houſe.
F. This filthy ſimile, this beaſtly line
Quite turns my ſtomach —
P. So does Flatt'ry mine;
And all your courtly Civet-cats can vent,
Perfume to you, to me is Excrement.
But hear me further — Japhet, 'tis agreed,
Writ not, and Chartres ſcarce could write or read,
In all the Courts of Pindus guiltleſs quite;
But Pens can forge, my Friend, that cannot write;
And muſt no Egg in Japhet's face be thrown,
Becauſe the Deed forg'd was not my own?
Muſt never Patriot then declaim at Gin,
Unleſs, good man! he has been fairly in?
No zealous Paſtor blame a failing Spouſe,
Without a ſtaring Reaſon on his brows?
And each Blaſphemer quite eſcape the rod,
Becauſe the inſult's not on Man, but God?
Aſk you what Provocation I have had?
The ſtrong Antipathy of Good to Bad.

VER. 185. Japhet — Chartres) See the Epiſtle to Lord Bathurſt.

Th'Affront is mine, my friend, and ſhould be yours.
Mine, as a Foe profeſs'd to falſe Pretence,
Who think a Coxcomb's Honour like his Senſe;
Mine, as a Friend to ev'ry worthy mind;
And mine as Man, who feel for all mankind.
F. You're ſtrangely proud.
P. So proud, I am no Slave:
So impudent, I own myſelf no Knave:
So odd, my Country's Ruin makes me grave.
Yes, I am proud; I muſt be proud to ſee
Men not afraid of God, afraid of me:
Safe from the Bar, the Pulpit, and the Throne,
Yet touch'd and ſham'd by Ridicule alone.
O ſacred weapon! left for Truth's defence,
Sole Dread of Folly, Vice, and Inſolence!
To all but Heav'n-directed hands deny'd,

VER. 204. And mine as Man, who feel for all mankind.) From Terence: „Homo ſum: humani nihil a me alienum puto. P.

VER. 208. Yes, I am proud; &c.) In this ironical exultation the Poet inſinuates a ſubject of the deepeſt humiliation.

VER. 211. Yet touch'd and ſham'd by Ridicule alone.) The Paſſions are given us to awake and ſupport Virtue. But they frequently betray their truſt, and go over to the intereſts of Vice. Ridicule, when employed in the cauſe of Virtue, ſhames and brings them back to their duty. Hence the uſe and importance of Satire.

VER. 214. To all but Heav'n-directed hands) „The Citizen „(ſays Plato, in his fifth book of Laws) who does no injury to any „one, without queſtion, merits our eſteem. He, who, not con„tent with being barely juſt himſelf, oppoſes the courſe of injuſtice, „by proſecuting it before the Magiſtrate, merits our eſteem vaſtly „more. The firſt diſcharges the duty of a ſingle Citizen; but the „other does the office of a Body. But he whoſe zeal ſtops not

The Muſe may give thee, but the Gods muſt guide:

VER. 219. And goad the Prelate ſlumb'ring in his Stall.) The good Euſebius, in his Evangelical Preparation, draws a long parallel between the Ox and the Chriſtian Prieſthood. Hence the dignified Clergy, out of mere humility, have ever ſince called their thrones by the name of ſtalls. To which a great Prelate of Wincheſter, one W. Edinton, modeſtly alluding (who otherwiſe had been long ſince forgotten) has rendered his name immortal by this eccleſiaſtical aphoriſm, Canterbury is the higher rack, but Wincheſter is the better manger. By which, however, it appears that he was not one of thoſe here condemned, who ſlumber in their ſtalls.

SCRIBLERUS.

VER. 220, &c. Ye tinſel Inſects! whom a Court maintains, That counts your Beauties only by your Stains, Spin all your Cobwebs) And again, to the ſame purpoſe, in the Epiſtle to Dr. Arbuthnot,

Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings,
This painted child of Dirt, that ſtinks and ſtings.

Theſe, it is objected, are Inſects not of Nature's creating, but the Poet's, and therefore ſuch compound images are to be condemned. One would think, by this, that mixed qualities troubled the ſenſe, as much as mixed metaphors do the ſtyle. But whoever thinks ſo, is miſtaken. The fault of mixed metaphors is, that they call the imagination from image to image, when it is the Writer's purpoſe to fix it upon one. On the contrary, mixed qualities do their office rightly, and inform the underſtanding of what the author would inſinuate, that the moral inſect is a more worthleſs creature than the phyſical, as he collects together, in one individual, divers bad or trifling qualities, which nature had diſperſed in many. And when, in fact, we ſee them ſo collected; as venom, ſophiſtry, and inſidiouſneſs, in a Court-Butterfly, the giving it the bite of the bug, and the web of the ſpider, makes it a monſter indeed, but a monſter of nature's producing, and not the poet's, cujus velut ægri ſomnia vanæ

Fingentur ſpecies.

VER. 220. Ye Inſects — The Muſe's wing ſhall bruſh you all away:) This it did very effectually; and the memory of them had been now forgotten, had not the Poet's charity for a while, protracted their miſerable Being. There is now in his library a complete collection of all the horrid Libels written and publiſhed againſt him;

The tale reviv'd, the lye ſo oft o'erthrown,
Th'imputed traſh, and dulneſs not his own;
The morals blacken'd, when the writings 'ſcape,
The libell'd Perſon, and the pictur'd ſhape.

Theſe he had bound up in ſeveral volumes, according to their various ſizes, from folios down to duodecimos; and to each of them hath affixed this motto out of the book of Job:

Behold, my deſire is, that mine adverſary ſhould write a book. Surely I ſhould take it upon my ſhoulder, and bind it as a crown to me. Ch. xxxi. v. 35, 36.

VER. 222. Cobwebs) Weak and ſlight ſophiſtry againſt virtue and honour. Thin colours over vice, as unable to hide the light of Truth, as cobwebs to ſhade the ſun. P.

All, all but Truth, drops dead-born from the Preſs,
Like the laſt Gazette, or the laſt Addreſs.

When black Ambition ſtains a public Cauſe,
A Monarch's ſword when mad Vain-glory draws,
Not Waller's Wreath can hide the Nation's Scar,
Nor Boileau turn the Feather to a Star.

VER. ult.) This was the laſt poem of the kind printed by our author, with a reſolution to publiſh no more; but to enter thus, in the moſt plain and ſolemn manner he could, a ſort of PROTEST againſt that inſuperable corruption and depravity of manners, which he had been ſo unhappy as to live to ſee. Could he have hoped to have amended any, he had continued thoſe attacks; but bad men were grown ſo ſhameleſs and ſo powerful, that Ridicule was become as unſafe as it was ineffectual, The Poem raiſed him, as he knew it would, ſome enemies; but he had reaſon to be ſatisfied with the approbation of good men, and the teſtimony of his own conſcience.
